CICOTTE OR JAMES FOR SOX

Chicago Veteran May Pitch Against Reds in Seventh Game

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 8.—All of Cincinnati has come suddenly to realize that a team may be down but it is never out until the last mace wielder has been effaced from the clouting landscape.

And with that awakening a chill of fear pulsed in the bosoms of those who disport the crimson hue of Rhineland came a feeling that perhaps some way or other those White Sox gladiators from Chicago may smash their way beyond the Red defences and carry on to the crest of the baseball world.

The feeling that has settled upon

BARONESS, CHARGED WITH FRAUD, IS RELEASED

Baroness von David, who had been held on charges of defrauding Boston stores. Photo by Marceau.

Baroness Josephine Von David, who, several years ago, married Dr. Marion Prichard Von David, while she was a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, was today allowed her liberty by Judge Duff after he had placed on file a charge of larceny by passing worthless checks, for which she was arrested September 6 on complaint by several Boston concerns. Her case was continued several times. Today, after pleading nolo, it was filed.

In 1909 Baroness Von David, then Miss Ada Josephine Steverman, met Baron Von David at a Conservatory dance. They were married four days later. Her husband is a prominent doctor, now in practice in Philadelphia.

At one time Dr. David was engaged by the city of Newton to make psychological studies of the school children of that city. The baroness, when arrested, had in her possession a French Pomeranian, Blue Boy, which she said was worth $10,000. This dog spent the night with his mistress in the House of Detention, later going with her to Charles street jail. The baroness is twenty-five years old. She has been a guest at both the Touraine and the Copley-Plaza Hotels, where she is said to have many friends.

70,000 TO STRIKE IF LIVING COST STAYS UP

New York, Oct. 8.—A strike of 70,000 longshoremen and tidewater boat men is threatened on December 1 unless there is a 50 per cent. reduction in the cost of living, John Reilly, president of the district council of the International Longshoremen's Union, declared today.

Gen. Edwards Buys Westwood Estate for His Home

Major-General C. R. Edwards has purchased the Dabney estate in Westwood, near the Dedham line, for a home.

The property consists of a large house with stable, garage and thirty acres of land.

It is next to the home of Allen Forbes and opposite the estate of George Lee.

"I want a place to be called home. This living in rented homes is well enough for the time being, but a home of your own in New England means my greatest ambition," General Edwards said today.

50,000 DOCKMEN IN NEW YORK STRIKE

New York, Oct. 8.—Fifty to sixty thousand longshoremen went on an unauthorized strike here today and as a result shipping is tied up at many points. Several piers are congested with freight and several ships were forced to postpone their sailings.

Officials of the Longshoremen's Union declare the failure of the men to report for work is in violation of their pledge to abide by the decision of the National Adjustment Commission. They are trying today to induce the men to go back to work.

The commission granted the workers an increase of from 65 to 70 cents an hour and from $1 to $1.10 an hour for overtime. The men demand $1 an hour and $1.50 an hour for overtime. In 1914 the wage scale was 23 cents an hour and 50 cents for overtime.

John Reilly, president of the New York District Council of the National Longshoremen's Association, was badly beaten by strikers this morning when he attempted to induce some of them to return to work.

The strike spread rapidly today, practically all of the piers around New York, Brooklyn, Hoboken and Jersey City being congested with freight. Shipping is almost at a complete standstill.

CHRISTMAS SET FOR UPRISING

Documents Taken From Leaders of Red Guard in West Virginia Cleanup

Weirton, W. Va., Oct. 8.—Papers taken during the raid on the secret headquarters of the Finnish Red Guard here yesterday indicated that a reign of terror throughout the United States had been planned for the Christmas holiday season.

Chief of Police Brooks, who has the literature, believes a mistake was made in sending the 184 radicals out of town after they had been forced to kiss the American flag.

"It's a bad crowd," said the chief. "Every city and town should be on the lookout for them."

While federal agents today were investigating the activities of the Reds here the county authorities were considering the advisability of calling a special grand jury session to take action against the men. Only two leaders were held.

More than 150 Finns said to have been members of the "Red Guard" in Finland, were forced to kneel and kiss the silken folds of the American flag in the public square here following the raid.

The command to kneel and kiss the flag was given by F. Warren Hill, a former sergeant of the 6th U. S. Marines, in France. Hill, who is now a police officer, participated in the raid with county detectives.

Large quantities of radical literature and a number of rifles and revolvers were seized by the raiders. Several postcards urging a "Red Christmas in 1919" and a Red New York in 1919 were found in the place.

The raid started an exodus of Finns. Three hundred are said to have already left here. Of the men rounded up by the raiders, it is said only eighty-five were employed in the steel mills. The others were merely agitators.

WOMEN FAINT IN A JAM OF 5,000 BUYERS AT THE ARMY FOOD STORE

Three women fainted in a jam of approximately 5,000 people, who gathered at the Army Base today, to purchase food and other articles at the daily sale in the retail store. They were taken to the first aid room for treatment. Hereafter, it was reported, a matron will be placed in charge of the first aid room to care for any cases of a similar character in the future.

Army food will be placed on sale at Fall River on Friday or Saturday, according to officials. Captain John Gibbons will be placed in charge. Goods are being shipped today. This is the result of the correspondence between the Fall River Chamber of Commerce and Colonel Glasgow.

Providence's opening is being held up. No reason was given. Worcester is asking for three carloads of goods each day and averages about $3,000 in sales.

Tomorrow, 2,000 pairs of rough, reclaimed marching shoes will be offered to the public at $1 a pair. These are in excellent condition, some having been used but very little. It was explained that these were real leather and ideal for men who are compelled to do outdoor work. The present supply is limited, but four carloads are en route to the base. No russet shoes have been offered as yet. Correspondence is being carried on with the Ordnance Department in view of placing women's shoes on sale at the various stores. These are shoes, on hand, purchased for use of army nurses.

Yesterday's sales amounted to $13,551.85, this being the second largest since the opening date. Because of the vast amount of metal coin handled every day, a coin counting machine has been installed in the office. This will count coins at the rate of 2,500 a minute, doing away with the tedious task of hand work.

Today, eighteen State Guards are on the scene to handle the crowds. It is estimated that it averages 15,000 each day. This squad is under the command of Major F. H. Moulton, of the 10th Regiment, M. V. M.

Pumpkin was offered today in No. 3 cans, containing thirty-six ounces, at 6 cents a can. A small quantity of assorted soups was offered in limited sales at 6 cents a can. The sales will continue Monday, as usual, despite the fact that Boston will celebrate Columbus Day. This was made plain by Colonel E. L. Glasgow.

The mail order department, to date, has taken in $134,000. Yesterday they sent out 1,532 orders, and up to noon today 558 orders. Lieutenant H. B. Barry wishes it to be made plain that no sugar has been sold through the mail order department, and that none will be offered for sale in the future.

The following articles are not available: Raincoats, soups, rice, hot water bags and corn brooms.

Ten clerks and thirty packers have been added to the force in the mail order department, making 290 employes in all. This was done to take care of the increased orders.

How to Send Mail Orders to Army Food Stores

Orders for food from the Mail Order Department of the Army Retail Store should be made out from price lists published in the papers. Notification of all changes will be given daily.

Money orders or certified checks should be remitted for the total of the bill. Personal checks will not be accepted by the Government.

The name and address of the person ordering should be written at the top of the order.

Checks should be made out, and the order addressed to the Superperintendent Army Retail Stores, Army Supply Base, South Boston.

Goods to the amount of 625 pounds will be delivered post prepaid, and all orders valued at more than two dollars will be insured by the Government.

the other contestants got away in rapid succession. Assistant Secretary of War Benedict Crowell acted as the official starter, but there was no ceremony of any kind.

As soon as they left the ground the aviators started in a northwesterly direction, hitting up a terrific pace. Some of the machines were traveling at the rate of 150 to 200 miles an hour before they were out of sight.

The weather was excellent. There was very little wind, and while it was cool the sun was shining brightly.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. E. Hartney, famous American Ace and contestant in the New York-Toronto race, was the second to get away. He left in a De Haviland four at 9:14 o'clock, carrying Lieutenant L. S. Webster as pilot.

Sergeant Charles Tindell, Major Harry Smith, Lieutenant Howard D. Norris, Lieutenant Lester J. Sweeny, Second Lieutenant George C. McDonald, Lieutenant-Colonel T. S. Bowen, Major Henry J. Miller, Lieutenant Melvin W. Maynard, winner of the New York-Toronto race, and Air Commodore Charlton got away in the order named. Charlton was to have led the race, but his machine developed motor trouble and his start was delayed. The crowd got a scare when Major Miller flew so low it looked as though the machine was going to dive into the spectators.

700 WITNESS START.

About 700 persons witnessed the start, but for the sake of safety all spectators, including the newspaper correspondents, were kept about a half mile from the starting line.

Between fifty and sixty airplanes were scheduled to leave Roosevelt field, and about half that number from San Francisco, as simultaneous starts were made from both sides of the continent. The total distance of the long flight is 5,402 miles. Major Theodore C. Macauley who has flown across the continent four times, expressed the belief that the trip would not be made in less than fifty hours' actual flying time.

Air Commodore L. E. O. Charlton, British air attache to the British embassy in Washington, was admitted to the race as an honorary contestant. He flew here from Washington, bringing a passenger in his Bristol "Fighting plane," a powerful air machine driven by a 264 Rolls-Royce engine.

HEROIC SCENES OF WAR ARE RE-ENACTED

Former Comrades Immortal "Scotty" Rehearse Parts for Pageant at Braves Field

The heroic scenes at Belleu Bois and Chateau Thierry, in which Privates "Micky" Perkins and Albert C. Scott of the Yankee Division lost their lives, were enacted by their former comrades today in preparation for the American Legion military pageant, Braves Field, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

These scenes were portrayed by members of Lawrence J. Flaherty Post of East Boston and Michael J. Perkins Post of South Boston. The East Boston post is largely composed of members of Company H, 101st Infantry, the outfit of "Scotty," the seventeen-year-old newsboy.

Sergeant Hercules Korgis of Lynn, who captured more than 250 Germans, instructed those members of the Legion who will assist him in reproducing his cat at Viery. For this event the town o Vieray has been reproduced in miniature.

The Citizens' Committee of the Legion have invited the newsboys of Boston to be guests at the opening performance of the pageant tomorrow night. "Scotty" was a newsboy and has been held up to the "newsjest" as the highest type of young American boyhood, and hundreds of them will be on hand tomorrow night, to see for themselves just how the Brookline lad died for his country.

Sergeant George E. Wilson of the 101st Infantry, a veteran of five wars, and State organizer of the American Legion, will be in charge of the military spectacle. He declared today that it would be impractical to bring the great quantity of war munitions to be used during the three nights to Braves Field until tomorrow.

lodge. Pieces of the roof were hurled in all directions, but none of the workmen was injured.

The explosion was heard over the city and thousands of persons gathered at the plant.

It is the theory of the mill officials that an effort was made not only to damage the plant, but to terrorize workmen who have deserted the ranks of the strikers.

Service Men Work Among Strikers as Peace Agents to Break Hold of Radicals

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Two hundred striking steel workers, men who had fought with the American army in Europe and who Sunday donned their overseas uniforms and led a parade of 5,000 strikers and sympathizers in a demonstration in Gary which resulted in the calling out of Federal troops, today donned their uniforms again and went among the strikers.

Today however, they are seeking to prevent a repetition of Sunday's demonstration by telling the strikers that the Federal troops sent among them are not there to "interfere in the strike," but to "protect life and property."

And they are emphasizing the fact that while the regular soldiers do not want to use arms, "they will shoot to kill if necessary."

COUNTERACT RADICALS.

In this way Colonel W. S. Mapes, in charge of the Federal troops, hopes to pacify the strikers, many of whom he said, had been "worked up to a frenzied state of rebellion by radicals posing as friends of the laboring men."

The overseas soldiers responded to a call sent out by Major Bye late yesterday, asking that former overseas men meet him. They responded in number. Among those were men who had participated in Sunday's demonstration.

Major Bye, in talking to the men, told of the finding by agents of the army's intelligence department of tons of alleged seditious literature. He pictured to the overseas men the radical activities of some of the men who were taking an active part in the strike.

ASKS MEN TO HELP.

Radical literature was being sent into other steel strike districts from the headquarters of the radical leaders in Gary.

Then, Major Bye asked these overseas soldiers to aid the Federal troops in ferreting and stamping out the radicals. Two hundred of these overseas soldiers offered their services, and they started out to aid the Federal troops in preserving law and order.

In the meantime reports reached Chicago that thousands of men in the Calumet steel district are returning to work in the steel mills. Union workers who had refused to strike and non-union men who had continued their work are going back and forth from the mills unmolested.

The federal troops are patrolling the streets of Gary and the city is under martial law.

Since the arrival of the federal soldiers but one disturbing incident has been reported—a brawl between two strikers ending in the stabbing of one of them.

300 PACK THE MEDFORD CITY HALL TO PROTEST RENT INCREASE

100 HOUSES OWNED BY ONE MAN

Tenants Tell of $6 Raise; Bill of Expenses on Property Causes Argument

Three hundred victims of alleged rent profiteers poured into Medford City Hall today to testify before the special investigating committee of the Board of Aldermen. Their stories were referred to the city solicitor, and if the facts warrant, prosecution will follow.

Eighty of those protesting rent increases were tenants of the New England Realty Company, with offices in Somerville. These tenants testified that their rents had been increased from $22 to $28 and from $24 to $30.

H. B. Brown appeared for the realty company. He said he owned all but two shares of the stock, and that he was not exacting an unfair profit.

TELLS OF HIS EXPENSES.

Mr. Brown declared that the 100 houses he owns in Medford are assessed for $5,500 each. In telling the committee of his expenses, he divided them as follows:

Taxes, $161.70; insurance, $12; water, $16; interest on mortgage, $216; repairs, $50, and depreciation, $135 a year. This is on each house.

Alderman Daly objected to the last two items. He asked Mr. Brown if the property could not sell for more than the assessed valuation, and the real estate man admitted that it could.

Tenants of the realty company declared that the repair work done was negligible.

Alderman Daly then accused Mr. Brown of exacting 16 per cent. interest on his investment. The house owner took issue with him, declaring that he lost some of his profits when tenants moved out, and houses were left temporarily vacant.

WOMAN BEHIND CURTAIN.

Charles Prentiss of No. 21 Madison street, West Medford, was one of the witnesses testifying as to alleged profiteering. He charged that two Cambridge women recently bought eight houses in West Medford and raised the rents $6 a flat without seeing the interior of the houses.

John Nuttall of No. 28 Bristol road charged that Les Will, owner of the property, raised his rent, and ordered him out without sufficient warning. When Nuttall protested, he said that a woman concealed behind a curtain in Will's home rushed out and offered to take the flat at the increased rate.

Baroness Walter de Mumm, American wife of German nobleman who seeks share in his vast vineyard in France.

Baroness Walter De Mumm, wife of Baron De Mumm of Germany, seeks to have her U. S. citizenship restored to her by act of Congress. The Senate has already passed the resolution, but it still has to be passed by the House.

The Baroness was formerly Miss Frances Scoville of San Francisco. She married the Baron, a member of the family of champagne manufacturers, in April, 1913, thereby assuming German citizenship under both American and German laws.

After the start of the war she returned to the United States and again is a resident of this country. She seeks restoration of her citizenship rights that she may obtain a share of her husband's large wine property in France.

As De Mumm is a German subject the French government is about to confiscate all his holdings in France, and Mrs. De Mumm, were she to fail to gain American citizenship, would be unable to obtain even a share of this property. As an American she could get property rights in the French holdings.

ALLOW WILSON A LITTLE LIGHT WORK DAILY

President Gains Strength Slowly; Newspapers Banned in Sick Room

Washington, Oct. 8.—President Wilson is stronger today than he has been at any time since he was taken ill, a week ago, and he is continuing to improve slowly.

This was the reassuring bulletin issued from the White House this afternoon by Rear Admiral Grayson, Rear Admiral E. R. Stitt and Dr. Sterling Ruffin.

Dr. Grayson revealed that the President has gained sufficient strength so that he is permitted now to do a very little work.

Just what it is his physician did not state, but it was indicated that anything the President is allowed to do is of a trivial nature, and designed more than anything else to satisfy his craving for something to do. It was also stated that the President now is allowed to sit up at intervals during the day, but not so long that the strain would prove too much.

SLOW GAIN DESIRABLE.

The slow and steady improvement in the President's condition is just what Dr. Grayson desires, he said. He pointed out that if the patient gains strength too rapidly there would be a possibility that he would get back "in harness" too soon and suffer a relapse, and the complete rest and quiet program will be adhered to as long as possible was emphasized by the physician.

Although Dr. Grayson had discouraged the practice of having Mrs. Wilson read to the President, he is now permitting it to a greater extent. Newspapers are banned, however, and the patient is kept in practical ignorance of the progress of world events.

Messages of sympathy were received at the White House today from King George of England, King Albert of Belgium, a delegation of Armenians, President Marco F. Suarez and the family of champagne manufacturers, in April, 1913, thereby assuming German citizenship under both American and German laws.

After the start of the war she returned to the United States and again is a resident of this country. She seeks restoration of her citizenship rights that she may obtain a share of her husband's large wine property in France.

As De Mumm is a German subject the French government is about to confiscate all his holdings in France, and Mrs. De Mumm, were she to fail to gain American citizenship, would be unable to obtain even a share of this property. As an American she could get property rights in the French holdings.

TEXT OF MESSAGES.

The messages from King George and Earl Curzon were sent to the President through Viscount Grey, the new British ambassador, while those from President Suarez, King Albert, whose message was sent from Chicago, and the Armenians were sent directly to the President. The Armenian message was signed by Anaroian and Hogros Nubar. "In the name of Armenia.

"I am distressed to hear of the illness of the President, but trust you can give me reassuring report of his condition," said King George's message.

"Very glad to hear you are better from day to day," stated King Albert. "I send most heartfelt wishes for your complete recovery."

"We have been very sad in learning of your illness and are thoroughly glad now to hear of your improvement," the Armenian message stated. "We, together with the Armenian nation, express our most sincere wishes for the speedy recovery of your health, so precious to your glorious fatherland, humanity, and Armenia."

The Colombian message stated:

"We present to your excellency the expression of our sympathy and the wishes we make for your excellency's precious health."

"The whole nation is watching with intense anxiety and concern the illness of the President," stated Earl Curzon. "Please convey to the White House an expression of our earnest hope for a speedy and complete recovery."

Mrs. Sayre, President's Daughter, Returns to Her Cambridge Home

Satisfied that President Wilson is on the road to recovery, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of the President, returned to her home in Hubbard Park, Cambridge, today.

Mrs. Sayre has been at her father's bedside in Washington for a week. She will remain at her home for about ten days before returning to Washington. By that time she expects her father to be recovered from his recent breakdown.

Mrs. Sayre arrived on the Federal Express. She was met by her husband at the railroad station.

CLAIMS BANKERS ARE BLOCKING JITNEYS

Taxpayer Accuses Insurance Companies of Imposing Impossible Terms

Charges that the bankers o State street are working through the insurance companies and Boston City Council to choke the jitney bus business to death and eliminate competition with the Boston Elevated were made by a taxpayer interested in the jitney industry.

The man, who is a responsible member of the community, charged that the insurance companies impose impossible terms in bonding jitney owners.

He further charged that the recent city ordinance requiring jitney owners to furnish a $25,000 indemnity bond for each car owned was a step toward the elimination of jitneys, not their regulation. Insurance companies refuse to issue indemnity bonds unless the owners of the machines put up the full amount in cash or gilt edged securities which has made it impossible for a poor man to own a jitney.

In these acts, he maintained that both the City Council members and insurance heads were being manipulated from State Street, in an effort to defeat cheap transportation.

He also declared that one man on the City Council sub-committee, which was responsible for the ordinance, was favorable to the jitney trade, but could get no support from his colleagues.

"As president of the Boston City Council I emphatically deny that we are aiding the Boston Elevated officials or State street bankers by blocking the installation of jitney service in this city, and I also wish to deny in the strongest terms the implication that some body is 'monkeying' with the members of the Council in this matter."

This statement was made today by Councillor Francis J. W. Ford.

"I am astounded," he continued, "that the $25,000 indemnity bond provision in the ordinance is too stiff and probably has prevented the commission from putting jitneys on the streets of Boston, but if there is any concerted move on the part of the officials of the jitney companies to have it changed I am sure the City Council will change it.

"There never has been any demand or any movement on the part of anyone to change the bond. The Council wants to serve the public. I believe jitneys would operate in Boston under proper conditions. I want to aid the public in getting cheaper transportation and I feel that the other members of the Council do, too.

EXPLAINS $25,000 BOND.

"The reason why the $25,000 indemnity bond was provided for in the ordinance was because the members of the jitney committee, of which I was one, thought full protection should be given a citizen in case of accident. As a matter of fact the jitney committee did not draw up the ordinance. It turned that work over to the very efficient assistant city clerk, Wilfred J. Davis, and he consulted Alexander Whiteside, then corporation counsel, who turned the job over to his assistant, Karl Adams.

"One of the reasons why such a large bond was provided for was because there had been trouble in smaller cities and we didn't want any 'fishy bonds' from fly-by-night jitney owners. I realize that it is unjust to ask a small jitney owner to put up $25,000 in cash and let it lay idle in order that he may do business and I believe the ordinance should be amended."

The members of the Council subcommittee responsible for passing the ordinance were Jame T. Moriarty, chairman, P. J. W. Ford, D. W. Lane, D. J. McDonald and Edward F. McLaughlin.

In proof of his charges, the American's informant pointed out that no jitney licenses have been issued in the last two months, since the underground crusade against jitneys really got under way.

"No other city in the country demands a $25,000 indemnity bond of jitney owners," this man declared. "Why, it is prohibitive. I believe it was meant to be."

FAVOR LIABILITY BONDS.

"Other cities allow owners to put up liability bonds. This bond is just as good as an indemnity bond, except that it does not compel the owner to tie up $25,000 in real money or get somebody to do it for him.

"We jitney owners are planning a conference to demand that the City Council amend this ordinance. We believe that somebody is monkeying with our city officials.

"The latest move is part of the general scheme which was revealed when the drive for higher steam railroad fares was begun. The attempt is to drive the people back to the Boston Elevated, and to leave them at its mercy, no matter how unreasonable its fares.

"We are willin gto give the passengers and the public every protection that the human mind can devise. But this indemnity bond plan is so drastic that we cannot do business under it.

"If the public deserts us now, in our hour of need, the public will regret it. With us out of the way, and with higher railroad fares, the Boston gentlemen who coin money out of the poor old Elevated will be in a position to snap their fingers in the faces of the traveling public."

It is understood that some of the jitney company heads wish to have the city ordinance so amended that damages for accidents due to faulty pavements will be in part borne by the municipality.

Mayor Peters declined to make pertinent comment on this arraignment of State street and its servants. He said he believed in regulation of jitney service, but did not specify what kind of regulation.

Stage-Struck Mother Regrets Trying to Kill Babies

Detroit, Oct. 8.—While two golden-haired little daughters to whom she administered poison were making a losing fight for life today in the Providence Hospital, Mrs. Hazel Leukart of Royal Oak passed a day of agony in her prison cell, alternately giving way to fits of remorse and bursts of feverish prayer for their recovery.

The abnormal desire for a stage life and the hatred of home responsibilities which drove her to the commission of her frightful deed had vanished. Nature asserted itself, and she became again a natural mother, grief-wrecked, but thinking first of her children.

"I love them dearly," cried the woman at the end of her strange confession. "I pray that they may recover. I know that I must pay the penalty for this deed, and that it may be life imprisonment. But I still have hope that a merciful God will intervene to save Shirley and Edna."

Mrs. Leukart's confession was unlike anything ever told within the grim walls of the prison here.

"A flash from hell showed me how to get rid of them," she said, explaining her use of poison to slay her children.

"My husband and I had quarrelled over the stage. I wanted to be an actress. I am only twenty-seven. But he did not want me to leave the children.

"I love my little girls dearly. It was this love, perverted, that caused me to think they would be better off dead."

Mrs. Leukart told Assistant Prosecuting Attorney George A. Steinon tha she had possessed the poison for years. It was corrosive sublimate, a slow, insidious poison, which relentlessly overcomes its victims and finally stills the heart.

Shirley, the older girl, is eight, and Edna six. They are not expected to live, although expert physicians from throughout the Middle West have offered their services, attracted by the circumstances of the crime.

DROP TWO MORE FROM DEER ISLAND

Announcement of Suspensions of Man and Woman Last Month Is Made by Bates

Additional suspensions of employes at Deer Island House of Correction, because of decreasing number of inmates there, were announced today by Penal Institutions Commissioner Sanford Bates. He stated that on September 28, William J. Carson, a fireman employed at $4.50 a day, and Eleanor S. Hackett, a matron, at $1.75 a year, were dropped from the payroll.

He also stated that on October 16 Dr. John F. Sullivan, assistant physician, $800 a year, and Della F. Flynn, assistant housekeeper, $500 a year, will be dropped.

Mr. Bates said today that he had generally notified the regular city officials of the previous suspensions and that there was no intention on his part to suppress the facts. Mr. Peters, in commenting on the matter said that "more handling" in his office was the cause of the failure of any public announcement.

A. F. of L. Leaders Look for Definite Results Concerning Steel Strike

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The hope expressed by Samuel Gompers that the industrial conference now in session will lead to definite results will prevent the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to defer until the conclusion of the conference the request of the steel strike leaders for an assessment to conduct the strike, it was learned today.

The strike leaders have been requested by the Executive Council to make a full report of the progress of the strike, an estimate of the expenses and a final amount of money will be required to continue the strike. The strike committee is expected to submit its report some time today.

After being in session two days, Secretary Lane announced that he had discovered that a great number of the confrees had never been introduced to each other. He ordered a "get together" meeting after the adjournment.

Members of the conference moved about the hall, meeting members of the other groups and getting acquainted. "Barney" Baruch, one of President Wilson's closest friends and advisers, acted as sort of host and introduced capital to labor and the public to both.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, moved around labor's side of the hall, meeting the delegates, many of whom he knew and called by their first names.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., did likewise. He conversed a long while with H. E. Wills, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

CHARGE BOY SHOT ENEMY OF FAMILY

Lupreato was shot in the wrist. The police say that he had been annoying the Bellisi family and recently assaulted the boy's father and mother. Bellisi was arrested, and got bail pending trial. It is alleged that he made further threats against the Bellisis, and that the boy became alarmed and tried to "get him first."

ASK FIVE-CENT 'EL' FARE FOR CHURCHGOERS

Attendance on Sundays Suffers on Account of Cost, Say Advocates

The Presbyterian Ministerial Association has petitioned the Boston Elevated to issue "church tickets" at reduced rates on Sundays, for the use of churchgoers.

These tickets would be on the principle of the half-price tickets issued to school children. The price suggested by the ministers was five cents a fare.

The petition pointed out that increased trolley fares were keeping thousands from divine worship. The tickets would, under the plan of the ministers, be issued only during church hours on Sunday.

Rev. Isaac Ward, pastor of the Columbus Avenue Presbyterian Church, and one of the advocates of the plan, declared that every ministerial association in Boston had been sounded, and was in favor of reduced trolley rates on Sunday.

Mr. Ward said: "It would be an excellent way, it seems to me, for the Elevated to show its respect for the community and its appreciation of the need of religion. This matter is to be brought up at the meeting at the Christian Endeavor building next Monday. We have felt for a long time that some concession should be made to religion, similar to the one made to school children."

COOLIDGE AND CURTIS SCORED BY LEGION

Calling Police Strikers "Deserters" Resented by Dorchester War Veterans

At a meeting of the Thomas J. Roberts Post, No. 216, American Legion, held in Codman square, Dorchester, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, we believe that the outbreak of lawlessness following the strike of the Boston police was due to the unsympathetic attitude of the Police Commissioner in dealing with the legitimate aspirations of the policemen, which forced them into the only means within their power to remedy their wrongs, the A. F. of L., and which finally resulted in a strike, after the policemen and the citizens of Boston had been assured by the Governor, Police Commissioner and the Mayor that in such an emergency the city would be adequately protected;

"The failure of the commissioner to have on duty the 7431 loyal policemen who had they been on the streets, might have averted the terrible scenes enacted; and

"The failure of the proper authorities to have the State Guard mobilized for the condition that was forecasted daily for several weeks prior to the strike, and

"Whereas, 400 of these striking policemen, veterans of wars fought for the maintenance of American principles and 250 of them our comrades in the World War, have been by the Governor of the Commonwealth most unjustly termed 'deserters,' and

"Whereas, the devotion of these men and their brother officers, as soldiers and policemen, has always been a cause for justifiable pride on the part of the people in Massachusetts; therefore be it

"Resolved, that we, veterans of the World War, express our disapproval of the action taken by the Governor and the Police Commissioner and that we declare our resentment against the application of 'deserters' to our comrades and others who are still fighting to make secure the application of the principles for which they fought as soldiers of the nation, and furthermore, be it

"Resolved, that we believe the best interests of our city can be served by immediately reinstating the 1,200 striking policemen who for so long have efficiently protected our city while patiently bearing conditions that the public now know are a disgrace to our boasted superior culture.

"By order of Post No. 216 American Legion.

MAROONED BY SHIPWRECK IN ARCTIC SPIN

Two New Bedford Men, Considered Lost, Home with Tale of Loss of Finback

New Bedford, Oct. 8.—With a thrilling tale of shipwreck and rescue by Esquimaux in the Hudson Bay region, Ernest Tremblay and Arthur Polsson, of this city, who were given up for lost with the schooner Finback, have returned to their homes. They brought with them the first details of the wrecking of the ship.

The Finback sailed from New Bedford last July bound for the Arctic. She struck a submerged reef off Cape Fullerton on the afternoon of August 3, and was abandoned by her crew. The life-boats were leaking badly and sank. The crew took to rafts, finally landing on an island in the bay. There they were marooned for two days and two nights. Their plight was discovered by Esquimaux on the mainland who came to their rescue with boats. The men were landed at Cape Fullerton station.

None of the crew was lost. The expedition was under the direction of Christian Leden, a Norwegian explorer.

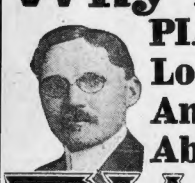
Why I Sell PIANOS So Low That I Am Talked About.—J. P. Collins



PIANO SALE

New Upright Pianos
New Player Pianos
Baby Grands
Talking Machines

Are you aware, my friends, that I am known all over Boston and New England as the man who would rather sell 100 pianos at $1 apiece profit than sell one piano at a profit of $100?

I have often been asked by piano dealers, business men and friends why I am willing to accept so small a profit on the sale of a piano.

My answer has always been, I am doing such a big business that it is absolutely necessary for me to carry and move quickly an enormous stock of pianos.

My yearly output amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. To hold a hundred, two hundred or five hundred pianos on my floors even a week awaiting a big profit would (if I continued that kind of a selling policy) amount to thousands of dollars interest lost a year on my money invested. Such a policy might financially embarrass even as big a piano operator as I am if continued any great length of time. Big sales—small profits—small or no profit is my motto—Don't wait—Sell, Sell, Sell now—Take a loss, if necessary, to make a sale. I have sold many a fine make piano at a loss because I had to carry out my policy.

GIRLS: DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty

Oh, girls, such an abundance of thick, heavy, invigorated hair; a perfect mass of wavy, silky hair, gloriously fluffy, bright and so easy to manage.

Just moisten a cloth with a little "Danderine" and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this magically removes all dirt, excess oil and grease, but your hair is not left brittle, dry, stringy or faded, but charmingly soft, with glossy, golden gleams and tender lights. The youthful glints, that color are again in your hair.

"Danderine" is a tonic-beautifier. Besides doubling the beauty of the hair at once, it checks dandruff and stops falling hair. Get delightful Danderine for a few cents at any drug or toilet counter and use it as a dressing and invigorator as told on bottle.—Advertisement.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Every Woman Needs IRON at Times

If women would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, rundown, tired out—when they are pale, nervous and haggard—there are thousands who might readily build up strength and corpuscle, become rosy cheeked, strong and healthy and be much more attractive in every way. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the healthy glow of youth leaves their skin and their charm and vivacity depart. A two weeks course of Nuxated Iron works wonders in many cases. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. At all good druggists.

CATARRH

Quickly Ended by a Pleasant, Healing Antiseptic Air. Just Breathe It

The little hard rubber Hyomei inhaler which you can get at any reliable druggist can easily be carried in pocket or purse. It will last a lifetime.

Into this inhaler you pour a few drops of the pure healing oil of Hyomei.

This oil is absorbed by the antiseptic gauze within, and you are ready to breathe it in over the germ-infested membranes where it will speedily begin its work of banishing catarrhal germs and ending Catarrh. Hyomei is made of Australian eucalyptus combined with other antiseptics and is very pleasant to breathe.

It is guaranteed to banish catarrh, bronchitis, influenza, tonsilitis, sore throat, croup, coughs and colds or money back. It often cleans out a stuffed-up head and opens clogged nostrils in two minutes.

Complete outfit, including inhaler and one bottle of Hyomei, costs but little, while extra bottles, if afterward needed, may be obtained at any druggist for a few cents.

HARVARD FUND IN BOSTON NOW $1,357,065

Hub District Holds Lead Over New York for "Progress" Dinner Tonight

Boston continued to lead New York today in the Harvard Endowment Fund drive, and passed the $1,200,000 goal set for tonight.

The Greater Boston district showed collections of $1,357,065, while the returns from the Greater New York district showed only $1,150,000.

Canvassing was speeded up today in the hope that the first "progress meeting" at the Harvard Club in New York tonight would find Boston still in the lead. Thomas Nelson Perkins, chairman of the Greater Boston committee, left early today to attend the meeting. Late returns will be telegraphed him by Henry S. Thompson, general manager in the Boston territory.

TOTAL IN U. S. $2,152,065.

Total collections for the country were $2,152,065. Reports from all sections indicated increased interest in the success of the drive. In Boston and New York, where the more intensive campaigns are being waged, reports showed that with large contributions already reported, the surface had only been "scratched" by the team workers.

In Boston, not more than 1,000 of the 11,000 Harvard graduates now living here have been appealed to. To make the canvass more thorough, there was a meeting of team captains, canvassers and committee chairmen at the Exchange Club today.

At this meeting it was reported that an additional 261 gifts had been made in the Greater Boston district, bringing the total up to 902. Included in today's voluntary gifts were three donations of $15,000, two of $10,000 and six of $5,000 each.

Team workers themselves are frequently surprised by the widespread interest in the fund. A number of contributors who never were connected with Harvard have contributed to the success of the drive. With such a spirit abroad, team workers are not admitting that anything but complete success can attend their campaign for $15,250,000 for the nation for the university.

Among the gifts reported by the New York teams was one of $500 from Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, who graduated from Harvard in 1861.

A gift of $10,000 was received from John B. Thayer, the noted ornithologist of Lancaster. Mr. Thayer was graduated from Harvard in 1885.

URGES CHANGES TO AID INJURED WORKMEN

Industrial Accident Board Would Abolish Time Limit on Compensation

Important changes in the workmen's compensation act intended to benefit the dependent relatives of workmen killed in industry or to better protect injured workmen are recommended to the Legislature in the annual report of the Industrial Accident Board, made public today. The board recommends:

That the time limit for compensation of injured employes be abolished.

That no rights of an employe shall be lost by failure to file written notice of injury or claim for compensation.

That the injured employe shall be consulted in the choice of a physician.

That the words "next of kin" be interpreted to include any blood relatives wholly or partially dependent upon a deceased workman.

That the burial allowance be increased from $100 to $200.

The present law provides for compensation for not over 500 weeks and not more than $4,000. The retention of this sum is favored, but the board recommends that the time limit be set aside in the case of an employe with permanently disabling injuries.

Where no rights of the insurer are affected by failure of the employe to give written notice of injury or claim for compensation, the board believes that the employe should not lose his rights to compensation. Certified copies of hospital records are suggested in lieu of such notice.

If the limit of time is to be removed during which the insurer must pay for medical care, the board recommends the return to the former method by which the insurer selected the physician, but believes the injured employe should be consulted in such choice.

A broader interpretation of the words "next of kin" than that used in probate courts ought to be made in order to cover any blood relatives totally or partially dependent upon workmen who are killed or die as the result of injuries received in the course of their occupation, the board states.

The advance in the cost of funerals should be recognized by increasing the allowance from $100 to $200, the board recommends.

Viking "Dynamite" Joins Departed Brother Spirits

Farewell to akevit, the dynamite of all liquors!

Local Norwegians, Danes and Swedes—everybody who ever crossed the pond on the Danish or Scandinavian lines, any strong liquor drinker, mourn the passing of "Viking Dynamite," now that Norway has put the ban on the manufacture of spirituous liquors.

Transcontinental travellers said today that of all the liquors ever distilled akevit had them all lashed to the mast. A white brandy which, to Scandinavians, was what whiskey before July 1 was to Americans, one shot of it and—curtains.

Akevit goes the way of absinthe, "Jersey Lightning" and "Mountain Dew." Nothing left but apple juice.

But reports coming in from the country tell of the apple juice crop being tenderly stored for the long Winter nights. And while there is apple juice—all is not lost.

FITZGERALD RE-ELECTED MAYOR OF NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 8.—James A. Haggerty, formerly a major in the 102nd Regiment, was defeated in the Mayoralty election here by Mayor David E. Fitzgerald, who won by a plurality of approximately 3,000.

NASH QUADS IN DEMAND BY U. S. ON ROADS

Government Places Order for 7,000 in Better-Highway Campaign

"In what is regarded as perhaps the most comprehensive nation-wide move for good roads ever undertaken, approximately 7,000 Nash Quads are being placed by the government in active road-building service throughout every State in the Union," says C. W. Rockwell, local Nash distributor.

"The Quads are being distributed by the Department of Agriculture to the respective State highway commissioners and through them to road commissioners of practically every county in the United States.

"This announcement following closely in the adoption by the United States Marines of the Nash Quad as standard equipment for expeditionary service.

"The government's good roads program calls for the distribution of twenty thousand motor trucks of various makes, and of the total number more than one-third are Nash Quads.

"The Nash Quad has a reputation with twenty-three nations for its unusual hauling ability under abnormal conditions. It is known practically the world over for its performance on bad roads conditions and traction conditions are bad. In road construction work the Nash Quad long since has demonstrated its superiority. This is due, in large measure, to its four wheel traction and automatic locking differentials."

NEW MOTOR TRUCK FEES EFFECTIVE TOMORROW

A new law relative to the registration fees for motor trucks, trailers and commercial vehicles goes into effect tomorrow. The new schedule of registration fees is as follows:

"Capacity of 1 ton or less, $10; 2 tons and over 1, $20; 3 tons and over 2, $30; 4 tons and over 3, $40; 5 tons and over 4, $50.

"For any capacity over 5 tons, $60 must be paid for the first five tons and an additional amount of $10 for each addition ton or part thereof.

"For all commercial trailers equipped with non-resilient metal tires, double the above fees shall be collected, and for electric motor trucks and electric commercial vehicles used solely as such, and for all commercial trailers equipped with pneumatic or resilient tires, one-half of the above fees shall be collected. For the purposes of this act, the term 'trailer' shall not include a pair of wheels commonly used as an implement for other purposes than transportation."

LOOK UP NEW LAW BEFORE YOU SELL CAR

Evidently the general public has not yet acquainted itself with the new law relatives to the sale of second-hand automobiles, which went into effect on September 26. There are certain requirements which must be complied with and failure to do so may cause serious inconvenience, and possibly fines.

In one instance came to the attention of the editor recently in which a party went to take out a license for his new car. He was asked what he had done with the old one and when he informed the officials that he had sold it and they had no record of his notification to that effect his new license was held up pending investigation.

If you intend to sell your car it is advisable to become informed what steps are necessary. Ask your dealer or your local police department and in Boston the police commissioner.

NEW OVERLAND MODEL "EATS UP" ROUGH ROADS

About one hundred and twenty-five Overland dealers assembled at the showroom of the Tower-Mellor Company Monday to see the new little 4 models and have a demonstration of the car's ability to perform over rough roads and on hills. W. L. Colt, district manager, from New York, and Roy Feed, his assistant, attended.

A severe test for the little car was made over almost impassable roads, but according to Weldon Mc-Mone, sales manager for local company, "the dealers were sold on the proposition to a man."

In the evening, after the dinner, moving pictures of the testing of the car over various parts of the country were shown.

LAWRENCE SENDING FOOD TO GERMANY

Lawrence, Oct. 8.—Lawrence is helping in a small way to feed Germany. The number of packages of bacon, tea and sweet chocolate sent through the local post office by local German people to their relatives in Germany is increasing and for several days nearly 100 packages per day.

The local post office delivered locally about thirty-eight tons of army food. The record of one delivery was made a week ago when the local post office delivered a seven-ton shipment inside of ten hours.

NEW MODEL DORT SEDAN MAKING A BIG HIT

ASK MR. FIXIT

Mr. Fixit will answer questions relative of our troubles through this column every Wednesday. Tell him your troubles. Do not send stamps for reply. Addresses must accompany letters to receive attention.

Mr. Fixit: Please tell me what effect, if any, it would have on an engine to cut down the wheels from 30x3 to 30x4? We have had an argument, one saying the engine would race and overheat quickly, while the other is in favor of it, and that the power would be increased by having smaller wheels. Would the gears in the transmission have to be changed? I have an old model Buick with 30x3 tires for it. Had thought of cutting the wheels down for economy. Also did not wish you advise me to change the gears unless you did, like Ball to allow for smaller tires.—C. G., Quincy.

Your engine is all right. Possibly would not overheat and I would leave that out of consideration. Your gears would not have to be changed, although you could get another pinion gear. If I remember correctly the Buick Company furnished two gear ratios with that model. You could have either one. The effect on the motor would be more power on hills, but quite a bit more speed on high. Difference in gasoline consumption would not amount to much. You would have a considerable saving on initial tire expense and probably the smaller tires would be cheaper to ship and run. If you can have this done without costing too much, you probably would be better satisfied with the running of your car for city and light work. It would "pick up" faster.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a small Overland 4. Am troubled with water getting in the oil. It doesn't seem to get in the cylinders, or make it miss fire, but decreases the power noticeably. The rear case fills up about every two hundred miles. Can you tell what the trouble is?—C. A. W., Robinson, Maine.

If your car is a model 79 or one that has a removable cylinder head, in all probability your trouble comes from water getting under the gasket between the cylinder head and the top of the cylinders. Take off the cylinder head and clean the gasket and surfaces carefully. Take some hard grease like cup grease and use quite plentifully on both sides of the gasket and tighten up on all bolts when you put it back. If this does not stop your trouble you have a sand hole in the casting of your water jackets which lets water in through the cylinder walls.

The water coming through the leak in the gasket must pass through the cylinders. It would have a tendency to interfere with the lubrication of the cylinder walls, as it must be a bad leak to fill the chain case so quickly.

A writer sent a query about an Indian motorcycle and it has been lost. If he will write again his question will be answered.—Dear sir: Fixit—Why is it necessary to retard the spark when an engine slows down on a hill to prevent knocking?—Medford, T. W. A.

As the engine speed decreases the spark must come later or after the piston has passed dead centre and is on the downward stroke. Otherwise the explosion might come too soon. Every motor is running at high speed and not lug starting it will take an earlier spark.

Mr. Fixit: I don't seem to get much steady power from my 1913 Ford touring car. It seems to misfire in the number 3 cylinder. I have put in a number of spark plugs in number 3 but am beating with a screw driver I find that numbers 1, 2 and 4 are all right, but number 3 is not. It seems to run right along and not slow down like it does when the other cylinders are misfiring. Have had the carbon cleaned out and valves ground. It seems to make no difference. It might be in the vibrator. How can you tell if the vibrator is in good condition? E. G. J., Waltham.

Your trouble is in number 3 cylinder and you feel sure it is not spark plug trouble. We will assume that your commutator is all right at present. Change your coil units about, using another one in number 2, and one in number 3 now, in any other, say, number 3 cylinder. If number 3 runs then, you will know positively that it is in the coil unit. It may be in the timer and it may be in the coil itself. Unscrew the vibrators and see if they are "pitted." If these pits can be brought out by rubbing on a fine file or carborundum stone you may be able to use them again, for that is if the pits are very deep try a new contact, but it would be better to take the coil to a Ford service station and have it tested first. You may have a short circuit in your vibrator. See if all the insulation on the wires to D. K. and contacts is tight. See that the fan blades are not touching any wires when in revolution. Wash the commutator out with gasoline and then put in some fresh oil.

ROBERTS POST WANTS POLICE TAKEN BACK

Thomas J. Roberts Post, American Legion, meeting in Codman Square Hall, passed resolutions in which they condemned the attitude of the police commissioner and expressed disapproval of the Governor's action toward the police, many of whose members are World War veterans.

They also resolved that it was for the city's interests to reinstate the 1,200 striking members of the force.

LARGER PLANT AIDS NEEDHAM TIRE OUTPUT

Low Cost and Adjustment Plan Boosting Sales of This Excellent Shoe

The Needham Tire Company has been making extensive additions to its plant at Charles River and the factory output will soon be greatly increased, according to Henri Rambonnet, the president. An American representative recently inspected the factory and in an interview later Mr. Rambonnet said:

"The extention to our factory is nearly completed and additional machinery and equipment will be received within the next few days. When installed this will give us a capacity of 500 tires a day besides 10,000 pairs of rubber heels and 5,000 pairs of fibre soles. The increased demand for our product has made this extension necessary and is only the beginning of future large building operations.

"This company builds a tire which is the product of superior workmanship and all the improvements which could be made to have our tires give the greatest mileage possible. Our tires are almost entirely sold through distributors located in various sections of the country and we get excellent reports about the quality of our tires.

"Our selling proposition is directly opposite to the one pursued by other companies, as we are making our charge calculated on an absolute factory cost, leaving it to the distributor to make his price to dealers, who again make their own price to the consumer. We also have no guaranteed mileage, but we are the only company that is making adjustments on a stated price per 100 miles of usage, and we have found that in general the consumer is very much pleased with that arrangement, and each purchaser of a tire is furnished with a blue list of that sort and knows exactly (if anything should happen) what it will cost to receive a new tire in place of the one he has."

SALES OF MOON CARS JUMP IN BOSTON

Massive Plant at St. Louis First to Build 105MM. Shells for Government

The Triangle Motors Company of No. 1094 Boylston street, distributor of Moon cars for this territory, has every reason to be gratified with the way the Boston and New England public is receiving this handsome car. William R. M. Very, president, formerly handled the Moon and the Marmon in Washington, D. C. He has associated with him A. Vere Shaw as sales manager, formerly with the Franklin Company in Worcester and the Scripps-Booth in Boston.

For the last two years Mr. Shaw was industrial engineer with the United Shoe Machinery Company. Associated with Mr. Shaw is Whiting Geer, late of the Marine Corps, who has the enviable record of having been in every major engagement of the American forces in France as a machine gunner. Mr. Very also served in the Tank Corps overseas.

In speaking of the Moon car, Mr. Very said: "The Moon was the first car in the country to use the full floating axle, honeycomb radiator, four doors in touring car models and left-hand drive.

"This latter was used in the 1901 models, but the other drive was made optional. The Moon Company built its first buggy in 1886 and its first auto in 1900.

"Some conception of the scope of its plant in St. Louis may be had from the fact that this company was the first in the country to get into production of the 105 m.m. shells for the government."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Don't stay gray! Nobody can tell when you darken gray, faded hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

STOMACH ON A STRIKE

"Pape's Diapepsin" puts Sour, Gassy, Acid Stomachs in order at once!

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, sour and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin to help neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid in Pape's Diapepsin, which costs so little at drug stores.—Advertisement.

Y. D. MEN ANGRY AT CONTEMPT OF HEROISM

Gen. Edwards Quotes Citations to Halifax Paper's Denial of Chateau-Thierry Battle

The statement published by the Halifax (Canada) Evening Mail that the battle of Chateau Thierry was never fought, occasioned considerable comment at the headquarters of the Northeastern Department.

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, commanding, who organized and led the famous Yankee Division which covered itself with glory at Chateau Thierry, contented himself with quoting citations of French corps commanders. Other officers and men, who also took part in this counter-offensive of the American forces which turned the orderly German retreat into a route, were offended, while some were inclined to treat the matter with contempt.

THE MAIL'S ANSWER.

The statement in question was published in the question and answer column of The Evening Mail in the issue of September 25 last. The attempt to discredit the American overseas forces in the face of official records, was as follows:

"Question No. 2580 — What do you know about the great battle of Chateau-Thierry, where the Americans covered themselves with glory?

"Answer—Nothing whatever. That was one of the battles which existed only in the imaginations of some American newspaper reporter on the spot.' Colonel Frank H. Simonds, the famous American military expert, whose articles proved so interesting to Mail readers during the war, has investigated the matter and in the interests of truth he has to admit that such a battle never too kpiace."

General Edwards said today: "No such battle as Chateau-Thierry? Let us see. The best answer to that is in the citations from General Degoutte.

"On July 28, 1918, his citation says: 'If one wants to judge the offensive spirit which animated the Americans and their tactical methods, one has only to follow in detail the operations of the 26th Division since the beginning of our counter-attack between Chateau-Thierry and Soissons. I could not have done better at Chateau-Thierry on a similar occasion with my best troops. You carried your line as far as any part of the advance was carried in Chateau-Thierry, including Torcy, Belleau Givry, Hourouches woods, Rochet woods, Hill No. 190, overlooking Chateau-Thierry, etc. You are recipients of praise."

TRIBUTE TO THE 26TH.

"On August 9, 1918, General Degoutte said of the 26th Division: 'This glorious advance is marked by names which in the future will make illustrious the military history of the United States' (mentioning in this connection Chateau-Thierry).

"From these citations enough has been quoted to prove that the battle of Chateau-Thierry was not a figment of the imagination. Those who took part in it are the best witnesses of what took place around Chateau-Thierry."

OFFICERS REFUTE CHARGE.

Lieutenant A. J. Kennedy, at army headquarters, who was with the 2nd Division and wounded twice, said: "What took place at Chateau-Thierry may be described as the Marne defensive which began July 15 to July 18, 1918. The Aisne-Marne offensive took place July 18 to August 12. Probably the objector is not familiar with the geography of that country around Chateau-Thierry and desires to use another term but that the battle of Chateau-Thierry existed is not a question with those who were near it."

Lieutenant James W. Boyer, Jr., one of the aides to General Edwards, and who was overseas with the 26th Division, treated the claim of the Halifax newspaper as one of the trivial events of the day.

"Those of us who were at Chateau-Thierry and know something about that territory, have no need to be alarmed at any such remarks," said the lieutenant.

"A careful study of events around Chateau-Thierry, by looking over the citations, will convince the skeptics that this district was a rallying ground for American prowess."

GERAGHTY SEPARATION PETITION CONTINUED

Newport, R. I., Oct. 8.—The application of Mrs. Julia French Geraghty for separation and separate maintenance and the custody of her son, John French Geraghty, was passed on the calendar of the Superior Court. It is understood that the case will be taken up later in the term. No explanation of the postponement was given.

Geraghty has a suit pending for the custody of the child on the ground that his wife is not a proper custodian. The hearing was set for October 4 in Providence, but was adjourned for two weeks. Geraghty was on duty as a volunteer policeman in Boston during the first part of the police strike.

HARVARD GIVES UP PLAN FOR MEMORIAL GATE

Plans for the erection of a memorial gate by the senior class at Harvard have been abandoned. The memorial would have cost $10,000, and this with the added fact that a common memorial is to be erected by the alumni and students of the university caused the proposition to be given up by the seniors. Fourteen members of the class gave their lives in the war.

ILLNESS MAY PREVENT TOUR OF MAUDE ADAMS

Maude Adams' nervous breakdown here last January left her in such weakened condition that a starring tour planned for the famous actress this Fall may be cancelled, it became known today. Miss Adams is at her Summer home in the Catskills, and her complete recovery is still a matter of many weeks. She was playing in "A Kiss for Cinderella" when she became ill, and spent most of the Winter with Boston friends.

Miss Adams was to have begun a satin-wide tour in December, under the direction of the Charles Frohman interests. Announcement of postponement of the tour is delayed in the hope that she may yet be able to return to the footlights. The popular actress, who is now forty-seven years old, won fame in "Peter Pan," "The Little Minister" and "What Every Woman Knows."

SOLDIER NEEDS CLOTHES TO GET JOB

Edward Redman, who arrived in Boston June 28 after service abroad with the 312th Engineers, attached to the 87th Division, is unable to secure work because he lacks clothing.

His heart is now weak, but the doctor says that he will be well again in six months. If he can secure light work during that period he feels that he will be all right again.

While Redman was abroad his mother contributed to all patriotic calls, often when she could not afford it. Now, however, she is unable to do much for her son, who is not working. He says that he will take a "suit that someone has no use for" and that any job will be acceptable, although he would like one that calls for some kind of mechanical work.

He was employed on bridges and construction work overseas, being employed variously as a lineman, steamfitter and plumber's helper. He does not claim to be expert in any of these lines, but says that if given a chance he will try to do his best.

He was a member of Company D, 2d Battalion. His division was a western one, and he is without any friends in the city, although he has always lived in or near Boston. If someone can assist him by giving any kind of a suit, old or new, the giver will be warmly thanked.

The address is No. 88 Princeton street, East Boston. The American has investigated his case and believes he is worthy of aid.

His letter is as follows:

Boston American:

Will you be so kind as to put a piece in your paper that an ex-soldier would like a suit that some one has no use for? I have only one pair of pants and they ain't good enough to get a job with. I was in France and when I got back I had no home and am out of luck all ways and if I get a suit I can get my self all right but until that time I am in bad.

Very truly yours,
AN EX-SOLDIER.

Stocks Strong in New York at Noon After an Active Morning

AM. WOOLEN IS A TRADING FEATURE

Advances Nearly Ten Points in a Market of Specialties

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks ruled strong in New York at noon after opening at advances, reacting somewhat and rallying during the morning. It was largely a market of specialties, in which American Woolen common was one feature. It advanced nearly ten points during the forenoon. Among other notably strong issues were Fisher Body, Associated Dry Goods, Studebaker and Barrett Co. Most declines were small, but Mexican Petroleum has recorded three points. Steels were irregular. Coppers were strong and more active than usual. Rails were rather heavy in the end of an hour, but had rallied. The market was active, hour transactions totalling almost 400,000 shares.

Issues to sell at record highest prices were American Woolen common, Hide & Leather preferred, Fisk Tire, Fisher Body and American Inland Oil.

Call money opened at 8 per cent. Loans on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday approximated $36,123,000 and were as follows: $17,225,600 at 8 per cent; $8,000,000 at 7½ per cent; $12,600,000 at 12 per cent.

Demand sterling opened 1¾ cents lower at $4.75½.

ADVANCED AT OPENING.

Prices advanced at the opening, few active issues failing to show large on the average, however. Oils failed to hold the centre of the stage as they did on the preceding day. Among motors, Studebaker was strong and active. Steels began higher, excepting Crucible. That issue opened with a decline, and got less attention than usual. It may be remarked, however, that operators who predicted it would go to 250 are now taking of its syrup, ing to 200. Specialties were features of early trading, Worthington Pump, Stromberg, Central Leather, American Woolen common, National Biscuit, Continental Can and Industrial Alcohol inserting the most interest. Fisher Body advanced more than sixteen points to 171 in the first hour. Equipments began strong but turned irregular. Rails were quiet but showed strength. Coppers remained inactive.

TRADERS LOOK FOR REACTION.

Among traders there was the idea the market is due for a reaction. There has been a considerable selling for profit and operators who have realized handsomely on the advance are now awaiting an opportunity to rebuy at lower prices. The high call rate and consequent bankers' disposition in regard to present speculation are regarded as likely to contribute toward a recession before long. While the public has been attracted by sensational advances by some stocks, the market is still decidedly professionalin character.

LARGE WORKING CAPITAL.

Worthington Pump never attracted as much attention in the market as it has obtained this week. Its balance for common after taxes, for the first half of this year is said to be equal to $20 a share, and the working capital is estimated at about $240,000,000 which approximated $200 a share for common stock.

The spectacular advance of Fisher Body this morning was coincident with the announcement that a new automobile company is being organized at Cleveland, which will be known as the Fisher Body Ohio Co. It will be capitalized at $10,000,000 and the parent corporation will hold a controlling interest. Its annual productive capacity of $30,000,000 is arranged for already.

RECORD HIGHS FOR FOUR ISSUES

Coppers Make a Better Showing on the Boston Exchange

Opening firm, the Boston market showed decided strength for awhile, but like New York became irregular. At the end of the morning gains and numbered declines. Four stocks sold on the local exchange at record high, net prices during the forenoon, they being Boot & Van Dervoort, Fairbanks, Punta Alegre and Ventura.

Other strong issues included Mohawk, Old Dominion, Calumet & Arizona, Davis Daly, New Cornelia, United Shoe, Gray & Davis and American Agricultural Chemical. They were fractions to a point higher.

Among issues to decline before noon were Amoskeag, Highland, Eastern Steamship common, North Butte, Shannock, Copper Range, East Butte, Island Creek, New Haven, Massachusetts Gas, Carson Hill and Stewart. Parish & Bingham was unchanged in spite of the fact that the Mullins Body Packing house issues were quoted and irregular. Swift & Co. and International Products were unchanged, while Libby was a little higher and Swift International a little lower.

Coppers made a better showing than for some time.

It is expected that exports this year will aggregate approximately 7,000,000 bales, which would leave 7,674,000 to meet American mill requirements. Consumption by mills in this country last year was 5,800,000 bales, and record consumption was 6,314,000 bales in 1917.

TIRPITZ CALLS BRITISH POLICIES INFAMOUS AND BRUTAL

REVEALS WAR LETTERS AND NOTES IN HIS DIARY

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS.
By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.
FROM MY DIARY AND WAR LETTERS.

These notes in the form of a diary and the letters from which extracts are taken, were always jotted down by me late in the evening or just before the courier bag left. Therefore, I must not be pinned down by any occasional inconsistencies or bluntness of expression. I never thought of publishing them, especially the letters. They were my thoughts about things just as they occurred to me at the time.

If after the breakdown of our country, I have decided on a partial publication, it is because of these notes, illustrating the best, form a most important auxiliary of my memoirs and because above all they show that the views expressed were not formed after the war, but in all essential points are in conformity with my judgment during the course of the war.

• • •

Coblenz, August 21, 1914—How much for myself I could wish that I had not lived to see this war. I still cannot understand how it was that we could find no modus vivendi with Russia. According to today's news the Balkan states are stuck again. Shall we succeed in tearing the world web which has been spun around us?

• • •

Coblenz, August 23, 1914—It is hard to sit here, comparatively inactive, while the world is in flames. The victory of the Crown Prince of Bavaria was the cause of great rejoicing here, all the more, because further consequences may be expected. We, the navy, can do no little just now, and that makes our position terrible. The English fleet remains in its harbors, but exerts its vast influence as a "fleet of being." Such a thing is rarely understood in Germany. They intend to crush us by hunger and paralyzing our economic life. It is a strange situation, the Baltic and the North Sea free, and we gagged. For the moment the land war has the upper hand. How will it be later?

Editor's Note: Von Tirpitz here recognizes a principle of the American Admiral Mahan, a world naval authority. Mahan contended that control of the sea was necessary for the victory of any nation which was not absolutely self-supporting. No matter how complete might be her victories on land. He contended that so long as the navy of one belligerent was in existence or free to move, its opponents did not have control of the sea.)

Coblenz, August 23, 1914.—I cannot bring myself to the spirit of rejoicing in the news of victory. It is to be hoped that our press will be reserved in its comment. As yet there has been nothing decisive. To be sure, in a fight south of Metz we took 150 cannon, but our people do not yet understand that the greatest danger, the polo-playing English, still remain. It is a mistake to hold them in contempt. England has been our natural enemy since Sedan.

I tremble for Germany, to whom I never gave credit for so much force and grim determination. But there is too much to be deplored in our leadership.

• • •

Coblenz, August 24, 1914.—Our military ports are no longer threatened. The army has till now achieved unheard-of successes. It is possible, though not very probable that the war will sooner be at an end than we thought. Only England hinders the way. The strength of the French army is already almost broken. It now depends on the fighting in the north. Since this morning, our troops (Brandenburgers, I hope) have been fighting with two English divisions.

(Editor's Note: On this date Namur was occupied, following the capture of Brussels, August 20, and the occupation of Liege, August 8, that completely blockaded military menace to the German naval bases.)

My heart is heavy. You will help me to bear it should the time come when they point at me with the finger of scorn. Inwardly, however, I am quite sure that on the fleet question I took the right stand and the only way possible for Germany if our folk were not to decline.

Editor's Note: Von Tirpitz is here writing to his wife. He apparently refers to the brief held by many in Germany that England was their enemy merely because the German fleet existed and was growing. The German mind seems absolutely incapable of grasping the fact that England or any other nation would go to war for principles or for any other reason than to aggrandize their power or wealth.)

Coblenz, Aug. 25, 1914.—(To my wife:) Do not be alarmed by our reverses in the East. They were to be expected. To be sure, in the beginning our leadership (Hoffmann) was not altogether first class. The fighting from Hasle to Namur is tremendous and unheard of before. The Crown Prince has a very hard time of it. The French fight well, we ought not to crow too soon.

• • •

FAILED TO CUT OFF FRENCH.

Coblenz, Aug. 27.—(To my wife) Here everyone is hopeful, although the retreat ordered by the French leaders has destroyed the hope of cutting off a large part of the French army. The English are also retreating and our cavalry are at their heels. They say the latter are suffering from hunger. The forced marches of the Pomeranians and Brandenburgers have been tremendous.

Yesterday evening on the Rhine Promenade I met King Ludwig, who had not seen his like since me. We spent the evening with the Emperor, who was in high spirits, especially about the achievements of his sons.

Today must decide things in Prussia. The enormous odds there are cause for anxiety. I cannot rejoice in our victories. The army seems only to have in view the defeat of the French. This will not suffice.

• • •

Coblenz, Aug. 28.—(To my wife) I too have no hope that Wolf (von Tirpitz' son, officer of the watch on board the Mainz) may be among the few survivors of the M. [illegible] the Heligoland battle. In the circumstances, were too unfavorable for him. The small cruiser was overwhelmed by [illegible] that I feel very hopeful that the ships were not provided [illegible] ought not to be sent [illegible] ed forces unless large [illegible] pedo boats are behind [illegible]

• • •

Coblenz, Aug. 30, 1914.—(To my wife) I have no words adequate for the news that Wolf was saved. We must all bear sacrifices for our country, but it seemed so particularly bitter to me because the sacrifices of our small cruisers was unnecessary.

• • •

Luxemburg, Sept. 4, 1914. The great offensive wave which swept over France and Belgium has slackened speed and it is difficult to foresee the end. I have just read that the main army of the Austrians has not fought well. That is very sad, because of its influence on the Balkans. They are beside themselves in the General Headquarters. The English are making gigantic efforts and are, in my opinion, our most dangerous opponents.

As a nation I consider the English infamous and brutal in their policies. They have during centuries built up a moral code in which they believe. According to it, everything is good, just and even religious which suits their advantage. All nations are their object of extortion according to divine decree.

But individuals they are to be respected and they are our stronghold for.

The General Staff seems to be off its head with triumph. As yet we have no means triumphed, no underlying the war as whole. We ought to have been in Paris now, at [illegible] could we foster and preserve that tenacity which alone can help us to a final triumph. The most difficult days are yet to come.

Belief in our reverses and rascality is spreading in all countries, and we have nothing to oppose to it.

• • •

Luxemburg, Sept. 6, 1914 — The situation is becoming difficult for the army. As we have not yet succeeded in encircling and taking prisoner great masses of troops the French army through the [illegible] of railways can always move and [illegible] front us in new positions.

(Editor's Note: Lord Loreburn also speaks of the value of the heavier railway system in enabling the allies to send out his quickly at any point with large masses of troops.)

The English, though small of effort, have again landed from 40,000 to 80,000 men in the north. It is to be feared that Maubeuge will soon fall and the besieging army corps there be set free. This is vital. A single army corps has already become of great moment.

Editor's Note: At this time the Battle of the Marne was in progress. In the engagement the Germans reached the extreme point of their advance, but were driven back by the French from the Marne to the Aisne.)

In spite of all their promises the Turks have not begun to fight. Feeling in Scandinavia has become more and more unfavorable to us. Italy can scarcely wait to fly at our throats.

Luxemburg, Sept. 8, 1914—Today I had a long talk with Lieutenant-General [illegible] burg and with [illegible] of the day [illegible] was sent [illegible] ly [illegible] to talk the [illegible] and to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THIRD BRIDE TO BE WIFE HE DIVORCED

This Time It Will Be "For Keeps," Says Roy Burton, Famed as Aviator

The large number of wedding intentions announced in Boston Hall are a refutation of the charge that the high cost of living is hindering romance. Some of the couples have been there before and are not under the delusion that two can live as cheaply as one.

BIG REVOLT IN MOSCOW IS REPORTED

London Story Says Lenine Is Jailed After Ordering Arrest of Trotsky

London, Oct. 8—Serious revolution has broken out at Moscow and Nicholas Lenine, the Bolshevik Premier, has been cast into prison, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Helsingfors today.

A reign of terror at Moscow was reported by the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Reval yesterday. M. Petere, the chief agent of the Bolshevik chiefs, is said to have been killed.

News of the uprising was received in Helsingfors from Moscow by wireless. According to this version Lenine had ordered the arrest of Leon Trotsky, the Red minister of war but instead of obeying the order the soldiers arrested Lenine himself.

Lenine and Trotsky have been in power with headquarters first in Petrograd and later at Moscow since September, 1917, after the overthrow of the Kerensky government. Lenine was in exile in Switzerland when the Imperial Russian government was overturned but shortly after the republican government gave him and a party of friends permission to cross Black Sea district that country en route for Petrograd in a sealed train. Soon afterward trouble began to develop in Russia.

The first serious counter-revolt came in July 1917. A few months later the Radicals seized complete control, and since then have been engaged in constant warfare with the Poles, Estonians, Finns, Letts, Ukrainians and the allies in Siberia and Northern Russia.

Continuous successes have been reported for the "White" armies in Russia during the last few days. Admiral Kolchak's forces are advancing eastward along the Ural mountain front, and General Denikin's troops are driving northward from the Caucasus.

Rhode Island Cities and Towns Protest Six-Cent Fare

Providence, Oct. 8—Two towns and two cities in Rhode Island say they propose to air their grievances over the 6-cent zone street car fare before the Supreme Court Friday, when they will argue to have Judge Walter B. Vincent's order vacated.

Judge Vincent is himself a member of the Supreme Court, and it was his order that provided for the 6-cent zone fare as such. Attorney-General Herbert A. Wright meant no slur in issuing a statement that if these cities and towns keep agitating about the 6-cent fare, it is likely to be doubled. This statement, according to the attorney-general, will cause fireworks at the hearing Friday. The street car companies, meantime, are charging the 6-cent fare.

RELEASE MAN WHO ACCUSED DEAD WIFE

Charges of extortion and larceny brought by Edward E. Beale against Fred Birge, a prominent business man of Ware, were dismissed in Belchertown Court Friday by Judge Bennett, and a nolle prosequi was entered on motion of Assistant District Attorney Nicholas. Beale's wife died about two years ago in Canada. Subsequently the husband made a trip to Canada and it is alleged received certain information to give to relatives between the deceased wife and Boyle. Returning to Quincy, he sought Beale and after giving him a severe thrashing demanded money, which Birge claimed Beale had obtained from the woman.

Birge later made several visits to the Beale home and the last visit was resisted by Beale's counsel.

When the case was called today counsel for both sides conferred with the judge and Birge agreed to make restitution. Two hundred shares of stock valued at $1,000 with $168 in cash and a silver watch were turned over to Beale.

Spoil a Whole Lot of Perfectly Good Dope by Beating Reds in Sixth Game

WHITE SOX SEE NEW HOPE OF VICTORY

Chicago Fans Return to Old "Dope" of Taking the Series

the city has been occasioned not so by the fact that the Reds were ... yesterday—but because of the ... they were beaten.

The crumpling of the mental Gib... of the Reds in the sixth, the ... ing that was handed to ... and the drubbing of Ring ... the final innings that he worked—... are the saddening factors.

GLEASON HAS NEW HOPE.

There's another, too, and that's the fact that the rally of the Sox in that big sixth of yesterday presaged a "come-back" that may endure long enough to batter down the pitching staff of the Reds, and crush the world's championship ambitions of the Cincinnati.

That's exactly what were out to do, quoth Kid Gleason, lifted from the depths of yesterday's despair to a new-born hope of today. "At last the breaks have come to us, and we're on our way.

"Once we a victory this afternoon and we'll tie the series. If we have one more thing Reds just once more they'll lie down and play dead. The two games after tomorrow will be a walkaway.

"I don't know and I won't know till I get him game time," declared Gleason, "if it be either Eddie Cicotte or big Bill James. It's the big game of the series for us—the game that makes or breaks us.

"I'm not worrying about two afterward if we grab today's. They'll take care of themselves. But I'll confess that I'm up against it as to naming the pitcher.

READY TO START CICOTTE.

"If James is right he can go in and beat the Reds—without much trouble. But I'd rather gamble with Cicotte—the smartest pitcher in baseball.

"But Eddie's been hoodooed from the start. Will the jinx chase him through another game—or has it gone away? Can I take a chance on that hard luck streak of Eddie's—or is it better to experiment with James? Anyway—that's a power."

But whoever pitches for the Sox is sure of barking far different than has been given in any game so far. The Sox have "come back," they're full of fight and pep once again and from the depths to the ethereal heights of new-found confidence.

REDS FIGHTING MAD.

They think that the turn has come—that henceforth they will have things their own way, and they mean to flash this afternoon all of the old spirit, daring plays, bloodgeoning power that steam rolled all opposition in the American League in... of 1919.

The Reds—what about them? "Oh, no one needs to fret much about us," grins Pat Moran. "They beat us—but it took 'em ten innings to do it. That was not any g... victory was it? And they w... really on merit but because ... succession of 'breaks' unli... that ever happened in a World... That defeat signaled of ... easing the boys simply has keyed them up, and eliminated entirely any possibility of fatal over-confidence.

"Those Reds will be out there this afternoon playing their game, and when they play their game they're unbeatable.

"We aren't doing any worrying—why should we? We've got a two-game edge on the Sox, haven't we? We could lose two and still grab the series.

"But the Sox don't dare lose a single game. And just to throw an ... against it for a pitcher for today. On the other hand, I have Sallee and Fisher primed for duty, and in an emergency I could stick in Luque."

All through the pre-game hours there was considerable activity in betting circles. No game of the series has provoked more wagering. The gambling, with 8 to 5 generally offered that the Reds would win the series.

But there was not an awful lot of currency showing on that proposition, and what have into sight was at once smothered from view by the White Sox backers.

There was the early promise that the crowd of today would eclipse the one of Tuesday, which paid $101,765 at a record figure. The native sons and daughters felt that the Reds needed vocal help and more than $... saw to it that the Reds were not denied.

MORAN RELIES ON SALLEE TO END SERIES

Misjudged Fly Led to Defeat of Reds in Sixth World's Series Game

By PAT MORAN,
Manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—Well we can't win every game—but we shouldn't have lost that one Tuesday afternoon. If it hadn't been for a few "breaks" it went the way of the Sox, a little overdressed as to form and the "Alphonse-Gaston" act that was staged by Larry Kopf and Pat Duncan, we'd be the baseball champions of the world.

It was our hope to end the series in the sixth game—and they weren't ... [illegible] ... Harry Sallee is going ... [illegible] ... got it. I heard a lot of that "Sam" 14 ... [illegible] ... and it is a ... the difficult as far as championship ... [illegible] ... I've seen a lot of ball games in my time—but none more hair-raising or more weird in spots than that one Tuesday. The crowd pays its way into the parks to get a few thrills—and I guess it got its money's worth in the sixth straight. Just about everything that could happen did happen—and a few things beyond the supposedly "impossible" were included.

MIX-UP IN FIELD.

"Dutch" Reuther was his same brilliant self this afternoon. He was inclined to be a bit wild but even that wildness wouldn't have been costly if it hadn't been for what happened in the sixth. "Dutch" showed a tendency to tighten up every time the Sox got dangerous—until the sixth. Then that mixup in left field that gave Weaver a two-base hit instead of resulting in a put-out came along—and the Sox got to "Dutch."

Weaver was a mighty lucky boy—and I guess he'll admit that himself. He wouldn't reach a base in safety once in a thousand times on such a little fly as that one. But that was the thousandth time when both Kopf and Duncan watched the fly drop between them. It gave the Sox a chance to stage a rally, and I'll say that they did. They busted the baseball around the lot from that time on in the way that had been predicted for them ever since the series began.

NO KICK COMING.

But all their hitting wouldn't have won a ball game if either Kopf or Duncan would have grabbed Weaver's fly. The most the Sox could have scored in that inning with Weaver out, would have been two runs, and two runs would have made the count 4 to 2 in our favor at the end of the ninth.

But we aren't kicking about the break that went the way of the Sox. Today's another day—the big day for us. The Sox won't beat us in the championship. With all the luck they had to go ten innings to gain the decision.

And they didn't expect such a succession of "breaks" for themselves in a single game again. Kerr was easy for the boys today. Just as I predicted. He fooled us the first time Kid Gleason started him against us.

KERR DIDN'T REPEAT.

But he didn't repeat, as our record of eleven hits shows, but I'll say that Kerr is pure youngster and that, everything considered, he pitches a fine game of baseball, and those Sox ... well, they certainly did rally when once they got under way. They seemed to have crumpled hopelessly in the early innings with the climax coming in the fourth when they bobbled and bobbled again. But with the chance to race along to win presented to them in the sixth on that Weaver play, those Chicago athletes surely did get busy. And they made a splendid fight that carried them to victory.

They deserve credit for winning—plenty of it.

Even though they had lots of luck to help them along. Luck is a factor in winning ball games—but it isn't the whole thing. And if the Sox hadn't had gameness to mix in with their luck, the World's Series would have ended before sundown of Tuesday.

MANY HARVARD MEN IN AMERICAN LEGION GAMES

Harvard has entered Denny O'Connell and eighteen more fliers in the three-mile steeplechase race to be held under the American Legion management at Braves Field next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The intercollegiate mile champion is in fine condition, having put on weight during the Summer and practiced with the cross country team at Cambridge for the past two weeks.

White Sox Played Ball and Won, Says Gleason

By KID GLEASON,
Manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—My ball club played ball for me for the first time in the series. If they will play ball for me like that today we will beat the Reds again, and if we beat them, the series will be won by the White Sox.

Before the series ever started I told a friend of mine that little Dick Kerr would be the best pitcher I would have in the big show. He didn't believe it. Well, little Dick has gone through twice for me, and if it ever comes down to a real finish fight for the world's championship I think he will be the lad that will land it for the Sox.

Kerr was in there pitching for all he could get out of it. I didn't lose heart even when it got a four-run lead on us. They didn't deserve anything like that. They were sticky to score at all. Just the same when they were four runs ahead I never had any intention of taking him out. I knew he was pitching great ball and I wanted him in there rather than any other man on the staff. He worked from start to finish in the same kind of style. That kid is a regular hero.

SOX WERE HITTING.

The whole thing in that ball game was that my gang was hitting. They were trying their best. They still think they can beat the Reds and they went out and fought hard and won a ball game when the series stood four to one against them. They might just as hard today and that is all I ask of them. I know my gang can beat any ball club in the world when it's playing ball in its regular stride. The boys were playing real ball, the hustling, fighting kind of ball that won the American League pennant for them. If they keep that up they will win three games before the Cincinnati Reds can possibly win another.

Now I don't know why my gang hasn't played any baseball before in the series but I always felt it would strike a stride, and I know what that bunch can do when it gets in a regular stride. I also know that it's a tough thing for any club to win four straight games. We have only won the first one of the four needed to capture the series. But I believe I have a gang that can turn the trick.

Everything depends upon the next ball game. I feel now that we can take it. If we take that one the next two will be easy. It will be a harder fight to win the next game than it will be to win the following two. I don't know yet what pitcher will do the hurling. Eddie Cicotte wants to take the job, in fact he's demanding it. He is dead sore over being licked twice by the Reds, and he is positive he can give them a trimming if sent out once more.

I have Bill James and a couple of other fellows eager for the star job. It's hard to pick one of them and the whole thing depends on the next game. Once that one is in, the other two will come easy no matter who pitches. I think I could pitch myself.

HOW REDS SCORED.

I told some fellows after the first game that Reuther never could win another ball game after the Sox. I was glad when he went in there yesterday I knew what would happen and it did. It should have been an easy one for Kerr, but because "Dutch" Felsch was playing wrong for Duncan in the third inning, the Reds got two runs. That two-bagger of Duncan's should have been caught. In the next inning they got their other two because Neale's line hit to right took a bad hop and got past Shano Collins and went for three bases. That bit of luck and the lucky poke by Reuther for two bases down the left foul line gave them two more and put the Reds ahead by four runs.

Well, when a team has a four-run lead and then loses out I figure it must have been playing a stronger team. I wouldn't even think about taking Kerr out after those four runs were scored because I knew he was working all right. He proved it. The Reds got no more and my gang got to hitting in the fifth and sixth, driving Reuther off the mound in the latter when they tied the score. Barring bad luck it was just a question of time then until we would win the game.

We ought to have won it in the eighth when Risberg came through with that terrific low line drive to centre field when Jackson was on ... and Gandil on first. The call was three and two and the runners were going when the Swede smacked that one and I want to tell you he smacked it too. But this fellow Roush is a wonderful player. He saw the possible chance for a catch the instant the ball was hit and he was moving. He made a fine ... the ball down by his ankles. Jackson was around third base by that time and Gandil was doubled on second and it killed that opening.

SOX WIN UPSETS EXPERTS

Everything All Set for Great Celebration in Redland When Plans Go Wrong

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—Just as Cincinnati was getting ready to tear down the fountain and erect a statue of Fat Moran in the public square of the Perkopolis, Chicago's seemingly beaten White Sox started hitting, overcame a four-run lead and won out in the tenth inning of the most bush-league game ever played in a World's Series.

Just which team deserved to win is hard to tell. It looked to me as if the National Commission ought to have charged each with a defeat. The White Sox defense crumbled, broke and staggered around until it handed the Reds four runs and the scribes and followers of the alleged pastime were quarrelling over the beer herbs. Then the Sox came back and slashed and mauled away at the ball until they drove Dutch Reuther to cover and, after Jimmy Ring had caused them to hesitate for a time, they renewed the attack and, although the brilliant defensive play of the Reds averted the defeat for the period of a regular game the Sox mauled out a run and won.

The defense of the Reds during the 8th and 9th innings of the White Sox was the one redeeming feature of a rather slow and unemotional game. The only emotion being that of the semi-hysterical crowd. They certainly staved off the disaster as long as possible and break after breaks went against the luckless White Sox. They hit hard enough to win half a dozen ball games and were tolerably lucky to win the one.

SOX LOOKED DOPE.

For four innings the White Sox looked as if they were playing an "oh well, boys, we're licked; let's get it over" game. They had no pep or fire and wabbled around looking more like dubs than champions until, in the fifth, Dutch Reuther commenced to wabble. The fact is that Dutch was far from being the fellow who won the first game of the series.

There was small glory accruing to anyone from Tuesday's performance, but what glory was coming belongs to Roush, who certainly stalled off that defeat for one more time. He made one of the most remarkable catches ever seen in a ball game, a diving scoop of a line drive that would have given Chicago a huge majority. Groh also assisted, and Duncan came near winning a pedestal in Eden Park by his magnificent work.

DOPE ALL WRONG.

Everything is going backward in the dope in this series, but its upsetting in the sixth game was worse than usual. It looked as if the Sox conceded the game and angles to the Reds, and that they were so eager to clinch their title that they exploded. The White Sox, who have been suffering from overanxiety, apparently said: "We're licked, let's go out and play it out." Then they relapsed into their natural style and won the game.

Of course there will be suspicious persons who will say that the Reds didn't try because losing means another big crowd and a lot of money, but I really think that the Reds lost by trying too hard. They had the game sewed up. It looked as if they could win as they pleased, and they couldn't hold their advantage.

REUTHER A MISTAKE.

The great difference, however, was that the Reds rose to occasions and the White Sox didn't. The Sox won because they hit so hard and so often, but just enough drives got past fielders to yield five runs.

The game was lost and the series prolonged, in my judgment, because Moran used Reuther. Almost any other pitcher on the team could have beaten the White Sox yesterday. It looked as if they were done and licked and eager to get it over and split the gate.

MORRISEY LOST TO THE B. C. ELEVEN

Boston College line received a severe setback when it was announced that Frank Morrissey, veteran guard of two years and captain and coach of last year's B. A. T. C. eleven, had been ordered by his physician to quit football. Morrissey has been suffering from a mastoid since the West Point game in 1917. He will go to the hospital today to undergo an operation.

Walter Downey, former High School of Commerce all-around athlete and also connected with the B. A. A track team, has reported to Coach Cavanaugh.

GOLF

When one stops to think, our Western brothers at arms are ant to be quite a bit more progressive than we of the East in this game of swat the pill. The passing from our ranks in the "pro" field of Mike Brady of the Oakley Country Club adds another to Western field, also their long list of leading players. St. Louis alone boasts of two great "pros," Jim Barnes, the winner of three titles last year, and Stewart Maiden, the "pro" who started Miss Stirling on the way to the championship, and who brought out the Southern stars, Bobby Jones, Perry Adair and Tom Prescott.

Detroit will have Walter Hagan, the present open champion of the U. S. A., and our own Mike Brady runner-up. Chicago boasts of Jock Hutchinson and that long hitter of hitters, Bob McDonad.

Our Western rivals certainly are showing speed and the East will have to get busy and spend money to hold what is left of our leading "pros" or we won't have a look-in in the near future as everything will go to the West (amateur and "pro" titles).

A mixed foursome tourney will be held by the Lexington Golf Club Friday, all entries should be made to Mrs. T. M. Rowseley, tel. Lexington 2334-M., who will give out the starting times. All of the local clubs will be well represented.

The Women's Golf Association of Boston will hold a match play handicap tournament at the Brockton Golf Club, Thursday, October 9. Their weekly tournaments are gaining in favor and a large list of entries is expected at Brockton.

The London Times has an advertisement in which a gentleman claims he is able to teach putting in one lesson—some teacher. Just think of all the time "Chick" Evans has lost by not seeing this wonderful teacher. "It can't be done," adv. or no adv. There are many golfers who have studied this department of the game for years and still have much difficulty in averaging only two putts per green, so it seems improbable that they could be taught efficiency so quickly.

With the added length of driving many holes which were considered "2's" a while back are now easy "4's". There is little doubt that this length is not due entirely to the great brilliance of the players, but a good deal to the improvement of the balls and clubs. If this improvement continues at the rate it has in the past all golf courses will have to be lengthened. So the standardising of the golf ball has been brought to the front with a good many players behind it and from this writing it looks that action will be taken shortly on this matter. If action is taken to standardize the golf ball the writer does not think anybody's game will suffer except to prevent abnormal driving.

THIS is the anniversary of the great fire in 1871 in Chicago, which destroyed 17,500 buildings, cost 200 lives and did $200,000,000 in damage. The recovery of the city after the conflagration and its amazing growth was one of the wonders of the world.

Oppenheim's New Novel Portrays an English Aristocrat of the Old School and a Most Engaging Sinner

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM,
Writer of Many of the Most Widely-Read and Thrilling Stories of the Present Day

Framework of the Interesting Tale

REGINALD PHILIP GRAHAM THURSFORD, Baron Travers, Marquis of Mandeleys, is the central figure of Mr. Oppenheim's new novel. He is an English nobleman of the days gone by, ignorant of finance and the despair of his solicitors in his nearly bankrupt condition. To add to his troubles, Richard Vont, once a gamekeeper, lives on his estate, near the hall, and is brooding over the fact that years ago the Marquis induced Marcia Hannaway, the daughter, to run away with him to London. She there became a talented author. David Thain, Vont's nephew, who has become a millionaire in America, comes home, sworn to the undoing of the Marquis. What happens then contains the interest and charm of the tale.

CHAPTER I.

REGINALD PHILIP GRAHAM THURSFORD, Baron Travers, Marquis of Mandeleys, rose, one May morning, from the gloomy precincts of the Law Courts without haste, yet with certain evidences of a definite desire to leave the place behind him. He crossed first the pavement and then the street, joined here and there by his somewhat obsequious companion and turned along the Strand, westwards. Then, in that democratic thoroughfare, for the first time since the calamity had happened, his lips were unlocked in somewhat singular fashion.

"Well, I'm damned!" he exclaimed, with slow and significant emphasis.

His companion glanced up furtively in his direction. The Marquis, as Marquises should be, was very tall and slim, with high well shaped nose, very little flesh upon his face, a mouth of uncertain color. His companion, as solicitors to the aristocracy should be, was of a smaller, more rotund and insignificant shape. He had the healthy complexion, however, of the week-end golfer, and he affected a certain unlegal rakishness of attire, much in vogue amongst members of his profession having connections in high circles. In his heart he very much admired the ease and naturalness with which his patron, in the heart of professional London, strode along by his side in a well-worn tweed suit, a collar of somewhat ancient design, and a tie which had seen better days.

The judge's decision was, with not almost exaggerated, as confessed gloomily.

The Marquis turned in at the Savoy courtyard with the air of an habitue.

"I am in need of a brief rest and some refreshment," he said. "You will accompany me, if you please, Mr. Wadham."

Became the Tail

The lawyer acquiesced and felt somehow that he had become the tail end of a procession. The Marquis' quick entrance and progress through the grillroom towards the smoking-room bar was marked by much deference on the part of porters, cigarette-room attendants and waiters, a deference acknowledged in the barest possible fashion by the Marquis, which his satellite decided to make a study of. Presently he settled comfortably in the corner of the smoking-room, where the Marquis ushered into the only vacant easy chair, ordered for himself a glass of dry sherry, and left his companion to select his own refreshment and pay for both.

"What," the former inquired, "is the next step?"

"Home to bed," Mr. Wadham replied, "is the next step."

Exactly what do you mean by that?" the Marquis demanded, knitting his brows slightly as he sipped his sherry.

"We have reached the end of the lawyer pronounced. The decision given by the Court means that—"

The Marquis set down his glass. The thing was absurd.

"Sure," he suggested, "the House of Lords reverses it?"

"Without a doubt, my lord ship," Mr. Wadham asserted, but it is of no use to us in the present instance. The House of the supreme Court—I mean our third appeal—and decision.

The Marquis set down his glass.

"The House of Lords," he persisted, "remains surely a Court of Appeal for members of my order whose claims to consideration are not always fully recognized in the democracy of the common law court."

"I fear," Mr. Wadham replied, with a little cough, "that the House of Lords is supposed to have other functions."

"Other functions"

"In an indirect sort of fashion," Mr. Wadham continued, "I suppose to assist in the government of the country."

"God bless my soul," the Marquis exclaimed.

There was a queer intangible silence. The lawyer was quite aware that a storm was brewing, but in his distinguished client never lost his temper or showed annoyance in any of the ordinary phases of life he was conscious of some curiosity as to what might happen next.

"You mean to say, then," the Marquis continued, that for the rest of my days and in the days of those who may succeed me, that I, the ultimate heir of [illegible] creations has sheltered one of the family retainers, is to remain the property of—of—"

"I fear that that is the decision of the court," the lawyer admitted. "The deed of gift was exceptionally clear."

The Marquis shook his head. The thing was incomprehensible.

"I can stand upon the roof of Mandeleys," he declared, "and I can look north, south, east and west, and in no direction can I look off my own land. Yet you tell me to tell me that almost in my garden there is to remain a demesne which can be occupied by any Tom Dick or Harry which its nominal owner chooses to place in possession—"

The lawyer signed to the waiter for their glasses to be replenished.

"It is certainly not justice your lordship," he admitted—"it is not even reasonable—but it is the law."

The Marquis produced a gold cigarette case, absently lit a cigarette and returned the case to his pocket without offering one to his companion. He smoked meditatively and sipped his second glass of sherry.

"A state of things," he declared, "has been revealed to me which I cannot at present grasp. I must discuss the matter with Robert, with my son-in-law. Sir Robert Less. He is an intensely modern person, and he may be able to suggest something."

"Sir Robert is a very clever man," the lawyer acknowledged, "but failing an arrangement with the tenant himself, I cannot see that there is anything further to be done. We have, in short, exhausted the law."

Sipped Sherry

A process," the Marquis observed sympathetically, which I fear that you must have found expensive, Mr. Wadham."

The lawyer's fees [illegible] have entered on behalf of [illegible] good cause with [illegible] to pay. The latter hastened to announce "amounts, I regret to say, to something over sixteen thousand pounds."

"Dear me!" his companion sighed. "It seems quite a great deal of money."

Some [illegible] the public [illegible] the lawyer proceeded, [illegible] has suggested that I should approach your lordship with regard to some means of—pardon me—reducing the liability in question."

So far as the face of Mr. Wadham's client was capable of expressing anything, it expressed now a certain degree of surprise.

"It appears to me, Mr. Wadham," he remarked, "that you are [illegible] me to attend to your business for you."

The lawyer knitted his brows in puzzled fashion.

"I am not sure that I quite follow your [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

HAMPDEN'S ART WELL RECEIVED IN HAMLET

Tremont Theatre Matinee Is Marked by Smooth Interpretation; Players Very Skilful

Walter Hampden began a series of special performances of "Hamlet" at the Tremont Theatre, to be given at matinees this week and next. He made his debut in the part in London, and has played it on nearly two New York theatres, where it was well received.

It takes courage to revive a Shakespeare play so soon after the war, when the public has not yet wholly turned its thoughts of serious drama following the urge after extremely light relaxation that went hand in hand with the war. But Mr. Hampden had that courage, and has managed to assemble some equally daring associates who made up a very good company.

AUDIENCE FRIENDLY.

By many, perhaps by most actors, the role of Hamlet is regarded as a part of their stage training. Mr. Hampden chooses that training after having already made some effective appearances in modern plays. He is remembered favorably here, and was greeted by an audience disposed to be friendly and enthusiastic. He did not disappoint it.

Gifted with a fine figure, good looks and an agreeable voice, which he uses with discretion, he is unusually thought for himself in matters of interpretation. While it is practically impossible, after the great Hamlets of past stage history, to invent a new Hamlet, with new qualities, yet Mr. Hampden has thought out some unusual business, which was often quite effective. He showed also wisdom in cutting the play in every possible way, without injury to structure and continuity. As for the latter quality, let us shock the Philistines by admitting that no modern playwright who stripped up his work into the sloppy scenes of the Shakespearian drama, would get a hearing today.

HAMPDEN READ WELL.

Mr. Hampden was at his best in the reading of the lines. Those beauties of the text which are wasted by so make it better for reading than for acting purposes but brought out with marked effect. In action he was easy and graceful, but less conspicuous than in his delivery of the lines. The company was generally adequate, in some instances excellent. For action alone, Del Lierre and Marie Lorella stood out by its verve, security and gallant dash. His was a very effective and picturesque. Others in the cast were J. Harry Irvine as the King; Allen Thomas, an excellent Polonius; Miss Ethel Fauter as Horatio; Annie Hughes as the Queen; Mabel Moore as Ophelia; and Ernest Bowan as the Ghost.

THE GRAY HAIR

A Mystery Story of New York Life

By Arthur Somers Roche

Whose novels have placed him in the front rank as a writer of detective stories

"CONFESS, Courtney, confess!" cried Heenan into the ears of the dying man.

"Courtenay's eyes glazed; they took an expression of surprise.

"Courtney? Courtney? The beggar must like me. You're the second man in Johannesburg that's called me Courtney. My name is Browne."

"But your real name"—and Blake shrilled it as though the dying man were a hundred yards away—"your real name is Overton!"

There was one last flicker of intelligence in the eyes of the doomed man.

Why, of course—Stillman Overton, Overton the Great, Impersonator of——"

And the actor's pride, which had been submerged in a false identity half a dozen years, was in the last words he uttered. And so he died.

XX

THE name of Allaire had been cleared; the name of Courtney received no stain. Those clients who had withdrew their business from Allaire were prompt to return to him. In relief at not being forced to go into hiding on Desbrosses yacht, at losing their half-million back, and out of gratitude to Allaire for his part in solving the mystery, the eight financiers had informed the young lawyer that his career would continue as though John Hastings had lived.

The practice that Hastings would have given him, they would give him. Phelan, Swinton and Lane had given him a dinner at the Maple Club, and did not insist that he play bridge afterward, although they chaffed him on being "bossed" before marriage.

Allison had promised to marry him as soon as the society had been forgotten or at least, had ceased to be a nine days' wonder. Her strong mind and body, aided, perhaps, by the soothing words of Allaire, had refused to break down at the shock of her pseudo uncle's death and the revelations that followed.

It was a mercy that Overton had never won her love, for, intensely loyal as she was, had she been found of him, the discovery of his impostures and other crimes might have invalided even so strong a young person as she. But she was all health and so of course was Allaire.

The bruise inflicted by Overton when he had gained admittance to Allaire's apartment was a minor matter, as was that dealt to by Blake. The insanity which had mastered the impersonator had weakened his arm toward the end. Blake and Allaire had been unconscious only a short time, and then had been able to taxicab to the Courtney apartment in time to witness the climax, which would have occurred even had they not arrived. Yes, Allaire was all right. Tobey was all right, too. He remembered nothing, save that he had awakened in a strange house. He was bound and gagged, but not blindfolded, and had recognized Courtney as his captor. But he had not been harmed, and, after working hours on his bonds, had loosened them.

He had then managed to break down a door and get to a narrow passage. He had followed this passage down under the ground, then up again, and had finally come up at the back of the safe in Courtney's library in time to recognise the murderer's voice and bear him to the ground.

That passage explained much. It led from the house, supposedly unoccupied, on Thirty-seventh street, through the Madden house, where Courtney owned the vacant house under an assumed name, and had, after probably months or years of labor, constructed the passage, which opened into the safe, and extended up another night to a closet in his room.

Undoubtedly, he had been the "burglar" in the dead of night, his progress through the passage on his return from killing Hastings, had been audible. For some reason or other, he had chosen to emerge from the safe instead of from the closet in his room.

At Allison's shot he had dodged back into the safe, made his way upstairs by his own room, descended, and cut the burglar alarm wires, and opened the kitchen window when he had gone down-stairs in apparent pursuit of the midnight marauder.

But the passage explained also Courtney's death. He had been able to enter the Thirty-seventh street house and race through the passage to his room in time to answer Allaire's second shot, perhaps.

His knowledge of Allaire's handwriting and business was easily explained. Allison, naturally told her supposed uncle of her fiance's business prospects, and he might have sent a note from Allaire to Allison.

Also, the girl had mentioned Allaire's plans for the night of Hastings' murder. Just who he had chosen to impersonate Allaire could be explained not only on the grounds of Allaire's business relations with Hastings, but also on the theory that Allaire, having socialistic tendencies, might be supposed by an insane man to have anarchistic views also, and be willing to join the society of which Overton was the only member. This theory also explained the sending of the thousand dollars to Allaire.

A Failing Hand

And the attacks on Blake and Allaire were explained by the murderer's fear that the gray hair, the only proof, might be used by Blake to trace the crimes to their source. Overton had got Allison out of the house by the errand to Wilkins, and then had come to Allaire's apartment, where, Allison had told him, the ex-commissioner and the lawyer were to meet.

Evidently Overton had feared that, if Allison remained at home, she would insist on looking into his room in case of her escape. Then, And only his fast failing strength—an autopsy later proved his insanity—had saved Allaire's life when he grey-haired visitor, who had given no name, struck him down in the moment of entrance and recognition.

Then Blake had been attacked, and Overton had gone home via the secret passage, only to lose his nerve at Heenan's return and at the appearance of the two men he thought he had killed.

The fact that he was Overton, the fugitive from justice, the "impersonator of Great Men, Past and Present," was the explanation of the clever deceits perpetrated by the murderer. Overton had been the greatest master of the art of make-up in his time. The years had not robbed him of his cunning.

And the fact that Courtney had really been Overton was the fly in the ointment for Heenan. The great detective had never guessed this. He had had only suspicion—suspicion on which he could have founded it hard to secure an indictment even, much less a conviction. And Blake, the retired commissioner of police, had investigated and, if Overton had not died, would have undoubtedly succeeded in securing a conviction of the murderer.

From His Wig

For the gray hair on Allison's lapel could only have come from the murderer's gray wig. And her pseudo uncle was the only person from which it could have come. Blake had looked up Courtney's past; the mention of the name of Overton by Allaire after his own researches, coupled with Casey Red's past acquaintance with the impersonator, had led Blake to Allison

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 8, 1919 BOSTON

What Excuse Is There for Scarcity of Sugar?

George Holden Tinkham has introduced another resolution in Congress of interest to the people of this State.

He asks for the appointment of a committee to investigate the recent history of the rise in price of sugar and of its scarcity. He calls attention to the fact that in 1913 the retail price of sugar was about 5 cents and that today it is 10 and 11 cents and that there is a prospect of its rising to 18 cents within a year. Moreover, to this hardship is added the fact that there is actual scarcity of sugar at any price.

Mr. Tinkham wants to know the reasons for this and so does everybody else in the United States. We have not heard that the ocean has swallowed up any of the sugar lands or that the production has been greatly affected by the war.

What excuse can be given for the present price and for the threatened price we do not know, and we hope that Mr. Tinkham's resolution will be the means to throw light on the subject.

Make Your Teeth Save Your Money

Copyright, 1919, Star Company

Your teeth probably have cost you a lot of money. Nearly every adult has gold, silver or other precious metal stowed away in his teeth. Many have had to buy their teeth outright.

Your teeth represent an investment a thousandfold more valuable than the amount of the dentist bill. They are your investment in health.

But what is perhaps more timely right now is that they can be made big factors in cutting the cost of living.

Read what Fletcher says about chewing food. Learn what Dr. Wiley has written about obtaining the maximum of nourishment from a given article of diet.

You will find that you would be able to get along on about half as much food as you use every day, if you would chew it slowly and thoroughly.

The human body runs on its food, just as the engine runs on coal or gasoline. If you shove coal full of clinkers into the engine, you will not get results. The clinkers would not burn and produce heat.

Putting unchewed material into the human stomach is feeding it food clinkers.

In order to be absorbed, food must be in solution—broken into tiny bits and suspended in digestive juices.

You protest vociferously when you pay a dollar for steak that you think ought to cost fifty cents. You are getting only half the value of your money. But you will get nearer a dollar's worth of nourishment out of it if you will only put your teeth to work.

We do everything fast. We rant if the train is late. We rush to work, rush through our tasks, rush home, eat hurriedly, rush to the theatre, rush back to bed and wind the alarm clock so as not to be late for the morning rush next day.

We have the national rush habit, and nowhere will it do us more harm than in bolting what we eat.

Aside from the physical harm occasioned by gobbling our lunches on the run, we cheat ourselves out of hard-earned money.

A dollar's worth of food, thoroughly digested and absorbed by the tissues, will give more strength at less tax on the body than two dollars' worth improperly masticated.

Put your teeth to work.

Dead of Hydrophobia, but—

It Was Not the Sight of the Dog That Did It. Foolish Superstitions and Some Other Things

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

Louis Rossano, six years old, was bitten by a mongrel dog. The Pasteur treatment was not given, but he seemed to recover. Six weeks later, according to his relations, he saw two dogs fighting, recognized the dog that had bitten him, and was seized with convulsions.

He died two days ago of rabies.

First: The sight of the dog had nothing to do with his convulsions; they were caused by poison put into his system weeks before.

Second: Mad dogs do not hate water, the name of their disease hydrophobia, meaning fear of water, is a false name. The animal craves water, but when convulsions close his throat he can't swallow it.

Third: Stories such as: "The sight of the animal that bit you will bring on hydrophobia," or "when the murderer is brought to the corpse, the wounds will bleed afresh" are foolish and breed superstition.

Fourth: People calling themselves civilized that allow a few to keep at large dangerous animals, not even taking the trouble to stamp out hydrophobia, as England has stamped it out, deserve occasional hydrophobia victims to remind them that they are savages.

A letter from the publicity bureau of the United States Army expresses hope that young Germans coming to this country will enter the United States Army.

This agitates the New York Times, but it need not.

Men of German name and blood fought admirably in our Civil War. Men of the same kind were among the first in every branch of the service in the war that has ended.

If we must have an army of 500,000 men, which is preposterous and undemocratic, and if we must keep 120,000 men, as the War Department suggests, "always ready to be shipped to Europe at a moment's notice," we could not do better than include young Germans in that army.

We were fighting once with England, but we have got over that animosity so thoroughly that the English can have anything they see, and if they don't see it, they only need ask for it.

We have now had our fight with Germany. It is ended, and there is no reason why this government, which rises above personal animosity, should keep alive vicious hatred.

WHY, by the way, should it be necessary to keep 120,000 American soldiers, "ready at a moment's notice," to go to Europe in case Senegambia, Armenia or Czecho-Slovakia call for them?

The Prince of Hesse used to keep men ready to be sent at a moment's notice wherever they were wanted, and he charged so much a head for them. England hired them to fight this country. That was business.

For this republic to keep men under arms, ready to be sent away to butcher and be butchered, would not even be business. It would be idiocy.

No American soldier should be kept under arms except to defend his own country.

More Truth Than Poetry

CHEERLESS PROPHETS

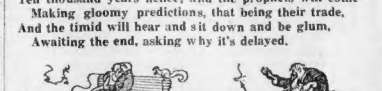
By S. E. KISER

HEAR the wearisome wails of the prophets of gloom:
They shiver with dread and they tremble with fear;
They tell us the world is approaching its doom,
Worse things than have ever disturbed us are near;
The warmth of the sun's going out with its light,
The earth's being robbed of its fuel supply;
They are warning us daily that nothing is right,
Let the faith and the hopes you are cherishing die.

THE Winter that's coming, the prophets declare,
Will be worse than the worst of the Winters we've had;
Wherever they look they see cause for despair,
They decline to encourage us—everything's bad!
Chaos is coming they point to the signs;
"See the riotous mobs!" they exclaim. "Can you doubt,
Though still the pale sun intermittently shines,
That soon it must weakly be flickering out?"

BEFORE Caesar's top had begun to be bald
There were prophets who told him the end was in sight;
It seems that the prophets are always appalled,
They refuse to believe in a future that's bright;
In Washington's day they were quick to declare
That the worst was approaching and couldn't be checked;
Whenever a prophet approaches, prepare
To hear that the world is about to be wrecked.

THE sun will be shining in June and July,
And the rivers will flow on their way to the seas,
And the boys will be lovesick and the maidens will sigh,
And daddies will dandle their babes on their knees
Ten thousand years hence; and the prophets will come
Making gloomy predictions, that being their trade,
And the timid will hear and sit down and be glum,
Awaiting the end, asking why it's delayed.



IT HAPPENS IN THE BEST OF FAMILIES

"Does your wife do her own housework?"
"Why do you ask such a question? Our housework is being done, isn't it?"

EVE STARTED IT

It always will be so, no doubt,
For so it has been from the first:
Each passing trouble that breaks out
Is thought, of course, to be the worst.

IN A big store.
I BOUGHT two shirts.
AND THE sleeves were long.
AND I was measured.
TO HAVE them shortened.
AND THE next day.
AT MY hotel.
THERE CAME a package.
WITH JUST one shirt.
AND THE two sleeves.
WERE SO very long.
THAT THEY covered my hands.
AND I wrapped up the shirt.
AND WENT back to the store.
AND SAW a clerk.
AND TOLD him about it.
AND HE wanted to know.
WHO HAD waited on me.
AND I didn't know.
AND COULDN'T tell him.
AND HE pointed to some one.
AND SAID.
"GO AND talk to him."
AND I went over.
AND TOLD the new man.
WHAT HAD happened to me.
AND THE new man said:
"WHO WAITED on you?"
AND I said again.
THAT I didn't know.
AND HE was angry with me.
AND TOLD me plainly.
I SHOULD find the man.
WHO HAD waited on me.
AND I couldn't find him.
AND AFTER a while.
THE NEW man relented.
AND MEASURED me again.
AND TOOK my name.
AND RIGHT close by.
THERE WERE a couple of men.
DRESSED UP like managers.
AND ONE of the men.
WAS LEANING against a pillar.
AND THE second one.
HAD HIS elbow on a showcase.
AND ON my way by.
I STOPPED and told them.
THE TALE of the shirt.
AND WERE they interested?
THEY WERE not.
THEY DIDN'T even move.
AND WERE angry with me.
BECAUSE I complained.
AND DIDN'T know the clerk.
WHO HAD waited on me.
AND I apologized.
AND THANKED them both.
FOR LETTING me talk to them.
AND SNEAKED out of the store.
AND LEFT them there.
LEANING AGAINST the pillar.
AND RESTING on the showcase.
AND IT'S three days ago.
AND I haven't got my shirts.
AND I'M afraid to go back.
FOR FEAR they'll throw me out.
AND I don't belong to anything.
AND I can't strike.
AND I need the shirts.
AND I don't know what to do.
AND I ask you.
ISN'T IT awful.
BEING COMMON people.

I THANK you.

PROBLEM OF BRINGING UP A FAMILY AGE-OLD

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

ADAM and Eve started out after their expulsion from Eden with the very laudable ambition of raising a family.

It cannot be said, even conceding their lack of experience and precedent, that they made a very brilliant job of it. Their eldest son was a murderer; their second a sheep-herder, which—however it may have been regarded in ancient Mesopotamia—is in the southwest of our own country considered as even less of a social recommendation. The third child was apparently a respectable nonentity whose only claim to notice is as a link in the genealogical chain, and the rest were so unimportant that not even their names are preserved. They are simply lumped together like the spot-cards of the pack as "sons and daughters."

Five thousand years, more or less, have elapsed since that first sorry failure; millions of young couples have buoyantly essayed the same task with serene confidence that they could show their own parents how to do it; practically every conceivable theory and system has been tried out. And still the problem of raising a flock of "young 'uns" remains as much a riddle today as it ever was.

About a score or so of years ago a slogan of this sort came into general circulation, possibly in the way of reaction against the sterner ideas of an earlier day and that threadbare dictum, "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

It was "These children did not ask to be brought into the world," and it has been made the excuse for every sort of parental indulgence and laxity.

How it worked in one instance is related in the following pathetic letter:

Father's Pathetic Letter

"Dear Mrs. Woodrow: I am a daily reader of your column, and I find your views on other subjects so sound and so interestingly expressed that I would like to have your opinion on this subject.

"When my two daughters were little their mother was in the habit of saying to me in their hearing whenever I attempted to curb or deny them in anything: 'These children were put into this world without their consent, and it is our duty to give them every advantage, no matter what the cost to ourselves.'

"Of course, it is the duty of parents to do for their children the very best they can, but when these girls now at every opportunity throw this phrase at their old father, and when their recklessness and lack of consideration keeps him with his nose to the grindstone, always on the edge of debt, I begin to think that it was very unwise of their mother to plant such a suggestion in their minds.

"Of course, there are children who through inheritance are made objects of sorrow or trouble; yet I have seen even born cripples who did not act toward their parents as if they had committed a great crime.

"Indeed, it almost seems to me as if fathers and mothers should not do too much for their children and as a result suffer on their own account."

Ready to Seize Excuse

He is perfectly right in more than one respect. The mother was extremely foolish to make such a remark in the presence of those girls. Questions of discipline or policy regarding the children should never be discussed before them. Like all the rest of us, children are only too ready to seize any excuse that tends to their own advantage.

In short, this popular saying has little or no bearing on the question whatever. The parents and the children are both here in accordance with a natural law, and it is up to each to make the very best of the situation.

JERUSALEM SHRINE FOR ALL THE WORLD

Jerusalem will be preserved as a shrine for all the world, if plans of the Zionist Commission materialize. Already experts are engaged in planning a modern, scientific city outside the walls of the ancient capital. The sites sacred to Christianity and civilization will be preserved and beautified for coming generations. Full particulars and interesting photographs on the subject will be found in next week's

MAGNETISM IS LIKENED TO ANIMAL LIFE

By Garrett P. Serviss

WHILE pounding slabs of petrified Cambrian sea-bottom yesterday, along the Champlain Lake shore, and picking out, like the "meats" from a cracked hickory nut, the symmetrical and beautifully chiseled shells of brachiopods—those little creatures of the world's dawn whose long-enduring race, but little changed, still inhabits the earth—my eyes fell upon a massive, dark, rough-faced, rusty boulder, lying in a kind of cove that the Winter waves had eaten in the hemlock-shaded bluff of the shore. There were many other big, round stones assembled in the cove under the shadow of the overhanging trees, suggesting a company of bald-headed giants in conference; but this particular one instantly awoke my suspicions as to its nature.

The direction of the suspicions will be indicated when I say that I immediately took out my pocket compass and held it close to the black-and-saffron surface of the suspected boulder. As I anticipated, the needle instantly swung toward the rock, turning 30 or 40 degrees from its normal pointing.

Here was proof that the boulder contained iron, as anybody might have guessed from its rust-stained appearance. It is always a thrilling experience to find one of these attracting rocks, because there is something so uncanny in their power that familiarity cannot breed indifference to it.

But there was a peculiarity that instantly attracted notice. It was the south end of the needle that turned toward the rock, and with such emphasis of motion as to imply a decided and, indeed, a forced choice. On the other hand, the north end fled away. Taking the hint, I passed the compass around the rock and found, on the opposite side, a region where the north end of the needle was attracted and the south end driven away.

"Poles" of Magnetism

So, my compass had detected the existence of "poles" of magnetism in this boulder, which was thus differentiated from, and incomparably exalted above, all the common rocks around it, for it had been born, or made, a magnet, a higher distinction than to have been a diamond, for a magnet possesses a kind of life, an internal organizing force which can reach outside and affect other bodies. This seems to lift it toward the level of the organic world.

So, though in a variant sense from that in which St. Francis used similar words, I might have hailed, my brother the rock," not an inert mass, but as it were a "creature," which could stretch out invisible hands and turn now one and now the other end of my compass needle toward a polar heart of its strange, two-centred life.

There is no harm in speaking somewhat mystically of these natural magnets, for the most learned physicist has not yet got down to the bottom of their mystery, or of the mystery of magnetism in general. It is foolish to say: "Oh, it's just as nature made it, so what's the sense of wondering about it?" There are many things that nature made which nevertheless pique our curiosity and our desire for explanation.

Suppose that that boulder instead of simply attracting the needle of the compass in my hand had attracted me, drawing me by the feet toward one of its hidden poles and by the head toward the other. Except for the fact that we are not composed of magnetic materials (as we might have been for all that we know), there would have been no greater puzzle in my being drawn by the stone than is in the needle being so drawn.

Theory of Phenomena

The suggestion of something recalling the phenomena of vitality in the behavior of magnets is heightened when we consider the theory which undertakes to explain magnetism as due to electric currents circulating in the molecules. Extending this in accordance with the new discoveries concerning the electronic constitution of atoms and molecules, we have a picture of marvellous and ceaseless revolutions of electrons in every molecule of that old iron-gray rock—some whirling right-handedly, others left-handedly, so that when two oppositely spinning hosts fall to cancel one another's effects, the molecule becomes a magnet, and trillions of such molecular magnets acting together make up the big stone magnet that seems truly as "dead as a stone" until a compass needle approaching it perceives something which makes it "start like a guilty thing," and whirl round, and face this way, and the reverse way, with a hasty promptitude which, in the moral world, would imply an imperative command.
